New courthouse groundbreaking is scheduled

The long-awaited dream of a new million dollar 34th district courthouse will move a step closer to reality at 11 a.m. Friday, when the official ground breaking ceremony takes place next to the Romulus Civic Center.

Many elected officials from the area will be on hand to witness the event. The court's jurisdiction includes the townships of Huron, Sumpter and Van Buren, plus the cities of Belleville and Romulus. The Detroit Metropolitan Airport is also served by the judicial facility.

Romulus Mayor James C. Stewart will host the event and has officially invited approximately 100 guests for the ceremony and a luncheon to follow at the Sheraton Motor Inn, Romulus.

Among the invited dignitaries are: both U.S. Senators, Donald Riegle (D) and Robert Griffin (R), U.S. Representative William D. Ford, Michigan Senate Majority Leader William Faust, State Representatives Edward Mahalek and Gary Owen, Wayne County Commissioners Edgar Harris and Royce Smith, Wayne County Sheriff William Lucas, 34th district Judges James B. Stone and Henry Zaborowski, mayor and supervisors from Belleville.

Also invited are Belleville Mayor, Justin Emerson, and Supervisors Patricia Cullin of Van Buren, Robert Demski of Sumpter and John Puskar of Huron.

Representatives from the Wayne County Road Commission and local businesses and industries have also been invited.

The need for a new court building arose in 1969, when the 34th district court was transferred from its temporary quarters in the Van Buren Township Hall to its present location in a dilapidated frame building at 30240 Eureka Rd. in Romulus.

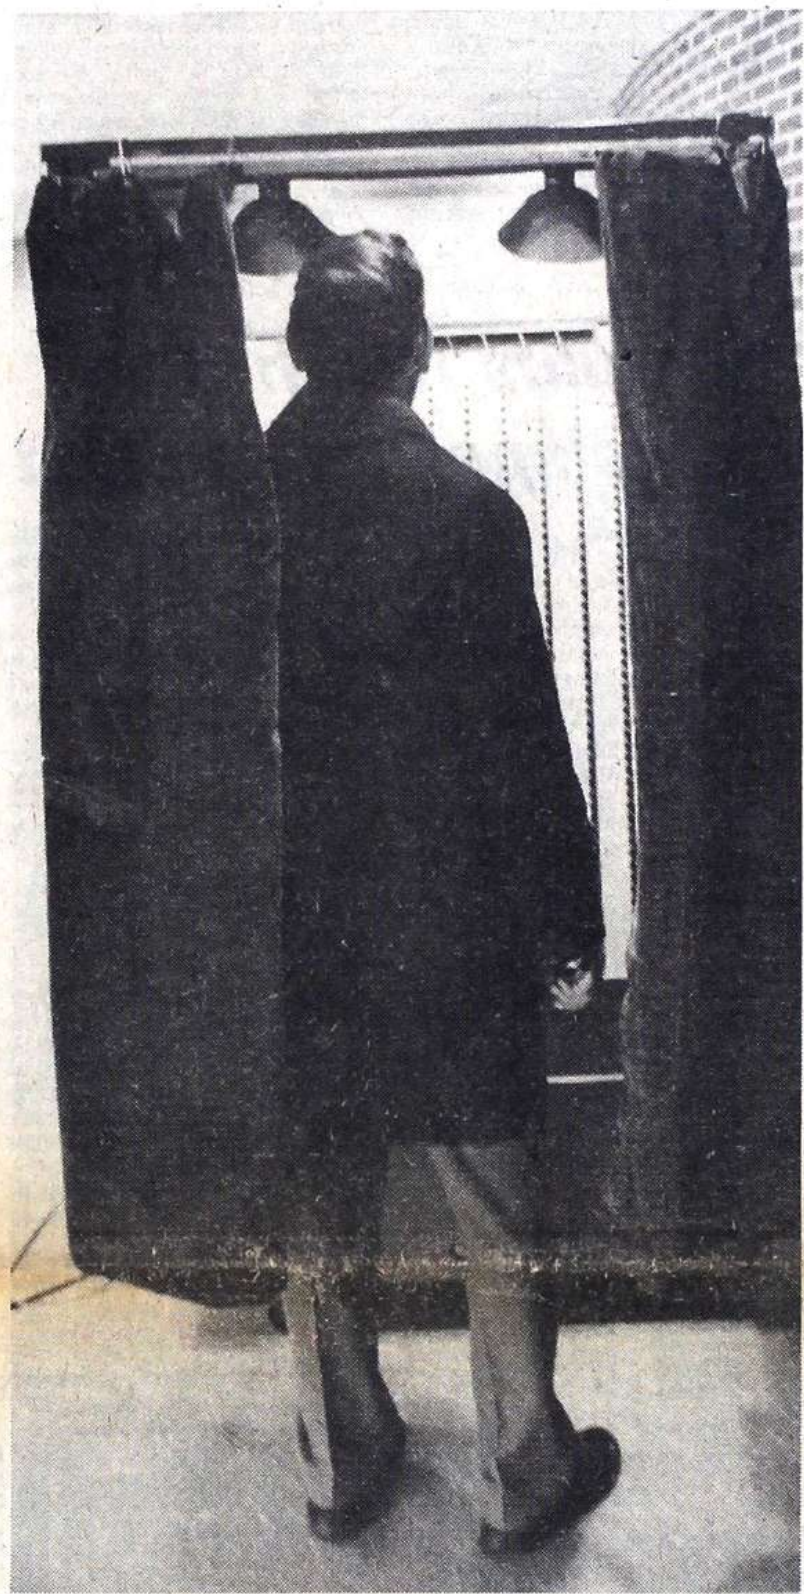

The present building is inadequate, according to Court Administrator Charles Walls, who cited insufficient storage facilities and cramped quarters as the primary deficiencies.

Last year, the two district judges handled more than 17,600 criminal and 2,500 civil cases on their dockets.

This creates an enormous volume of paper work, according to Walls, who estimates he is presently holding some 300,000 records, required by State law to be kept for seven years.

The new building, which will cost $931,000 is slated for completion by the end of this year, and will contain approximately 17,500 square feet of courtroom and office space.

The public is cordially invited to attend the ground breaking ceremonies, to begin promptly at 11 a.m. next to the Library at 11121 Wayne Road, Romulus.

Decision is in

Romulus residents went to the polls Saturday for the third time in less than a year, and again rejected the school board's request for additional operating millage. The defeat was by less than 200 votes out of 3,477 cast. The defeat of the millage was a big disappointment to school officials who had felt that chances were good for passage.

Let the good times roll

'Michigan Week' festivities planned

Dark blue state flags flying from every flag pole, people dancing in the streets, a colorful circus tent filled with interesting displays, brightly-painted banners welcoming visitors to the city, specially concocted drinks served in local hotels, clowns, awards and much excitement.

Sound like a county fair? A leftover Bicentennial celebration? A rite of spring?

If you answered yes to all of the above, you're right, for all of the above and more will be a part of the City of Romulus' 1977 celebration of Michigan Week, May 14-21.

Although Michigan Week has been observed in communities around the State since 1953, many towns and cities, including Romulus, have traditionally limited the occasion to an exchange of mayors.

This year, Romulus Mayor James C. Stewart will visit Highland Park, Michigan on May 16, while Romulus will play host to that city's mayor.

However, this year, encouraged by the feelings of community pride, patriotism and good will fostered by the Bicentennial celebrations, Romulus' city officials have decided to observe the entire eight-day period.

The theme for this year's observance is: "Enjoy Michigan Hospitality."

Accordingly, each day will highlight a theme designed to teach Romulus citizens more about Michigan and their own community, help them to become more aware of the opportunities and advantages of living in Michigan and encourage them to work together to make Michigan and Romulus even better.

Beginning Saturday, May 14, "Community Pride Day," Romulus senior citizen groups and local civic organizations are planning activities to encourage pride in our community. Some activities include street washing, beautification projects, tree planting and clean-up campaigns.

Sunday, May 15 is "Heritage Day," with local churches giving special recognition to our great heritage, which includes freedom of worship.

Monday is "Government Day", and Romulus officials are busy preparing a full day's schedule for the visiting dignitaries from Highland Park.

On "World Trade Day", May 16, the Metropolitan Airport will be the focal point for highlighting the great flow of trade that passes through Romulus.

On Wednesday, "Livelihood Day", the emphasis will shift to the many businesses and industries located in Romulus, and their contribution to the city and the vital part they play in the lives of many of our residents.

"Education Day" is scheduled for Thursday and will center around the Romulus school system and the important role education will play in the future of students.

Friday is normally a day of celebration, but on May 20, there will be a chance for even greater merry-making, with Romulus hotels and banks preparing a full day of special events, handing out buttons, banners, prizes, free gifts, dinners, drinks and many other things.

The climax of the week will come on Saturday, May 21 - "Youth Day" - with the Department of Recreation planning various outdoor activities, including a street dance, to close out the festivities.

There are many people already involved, but many more are needed. To make Romulus' first full week observance a success, all residents are encouraged to become involved. For more information, call the Romulus Hotline, 941-0666, Ext. 18 at city hall.

Michigan Week is sponsored annually by the Greater Michigan Foundation, a non-profit, charitable, educational foundation headquartered in Lansing.

Wayne teen killed in hit-run

A 13-year-old Wayne youth was struck and killed Friday night as he walked with a companion along the shoulder of Ecorse Road near Merriman Road in Romulus.

Dead is Dale Mayer, 3935 Gloria, Wayne, who was walking with Carl Randall Akers along the north side of Ecorse Road, when a car driven by Joseph Burke Manley, 27, apparently went out of control as he attempted to pass another car.

As Manley's 1973 yellow Volkswagen was travelling eastbound on Ecorse Rd., he attempted to pass a car in the right lane and crossed both westbound lanes, striking both 13-year-old boys.

The Mayer youth was dead on arrival at Wayne County General Hospital, but Carl received a glancing blow from the careening automobile and suffered only an injured arm.

Manley, who lives at 14881 John L. St. in Flat Rock, left the scene of the accident and drove to the Town and Country Restaurant at Ecorse and Inkster Roads. He phoned the State Police Post at Flat Rock and told them he'd been in an accident and his location.

The police notified Wayne County Sheriff's Patrol who picked up Manley at the restaurant, according to the police report.

Manley was formally arraigned Sunday on a charge of manslaughter with examination set for 9 a.m. March 30 at Romulus' 34th District Court.

Police believe Mayer was visiting his mother, Sharon, 34, whose address was listed as 6956 Homefield, Romulus. Akers resides at 6792 Birchdale, Romulus.

In almost the same location, a high-speed chase Saturday afternoon saw an Allen Park policeman race at speeds up to 80 miles per hour after a man driving a white 1971 Ford on I-94 expressway.

The fleeing speeder came to an abrupt halt when he slammed broadside into a 1974 red Chevrolet that was trying to escape the oncoming cars. The woman driver of the Chevrolet and her passenger were pinned in the car and remain in critical condition at Wayne County General Hospital.

The driver of the runaway car is listed in serious condition at the same hospital.

It all started when Allen Park police officer Richard Miller spotted the white 1971 Ford travelling in excess of 80 miles per hour with its muffler dragging on the pavement. When Miller tried to pull the Ford over, the driver looked at him and sped away.

Miller, who had a Citizen's Band radio in his car, called to a truck driver just ahead on I-94, asking him to slow down and "box in" the fleeing Ford. The trucker cooperated, but the driver of the Ford caromed off the patrol car's right fender and took off at a high rate of speed.

With both cars going approximately 80 m.p.h., Miller tried to bump the white Ford into a snow bank at Beech Daly. The driver of the Ford turned off I-94 onto the Ecorse Rd. exit where he ran a red light at the Inkster Road intersection.

The Ford proceeded westbound on Ecorse Rd. with Miller in hot pursuit and other police units, which had been notified by radio. As the woman driver of the red Chevrolet saw in her rear view mirror the high speed chase behind her, she attempted to turn out of the way at Harrison Rd. but was hit broadside, smashing both cars extensively and leaving all occupants in serious condition at Wayne County General.

Police said they are withholding all names while the investigation is continuing.

Voters deny new millage

By JIM BRADLEY

Romulus residents went to the polls Saturday and rejected for the third time in less than a year the school board's request for additional operating millage.

Unofficial results showed the defeat was by less than 200 votes out of 3,477 cast — 1,839 to 1,646 — but it was still a big disappointment to school officials who felt the 5-year 8.5 mill proposal had a good chance to pass. (A mill is equal to $1 per $1,000 of state equalized valuation on property).

In addition, a large volunteer citizen's group was highly disappointed by the rejection.

'Additional cuts will now have to be considered'

Most of the 193 vote difference came from Absentee Ballots. Many of the 343 absentee ballots were senior citizens with children out of school and they defeated the proposal by a resounding 241-92 count. Another indication of what some term "a revolt of older taxpayers" was Precinct 1, which is in an older section of town. Voters in that district said "no" by a vote of 101-45.

The absentee ballots and Precinct 1 defeated the proposal by 205 votes, which means the other 18 precincts were about even on the question. Of the city's 19 precincts, nine districts had more "Yes" votes, while 10 precincts defeated the measure.

On the other hand, Precinct 12, which contains many young couples with school-age children, approved it overwhelmingly by a 183 to 73 margin.

School Superintendent James Garfield has said a large turnout would favor passage of the additional operating money. Now, with another millage defeat, the school board will have to see which cut-backs it will have to make in the already financially hampered school district.

City Clerk Leonard Folmar had predicted that at least 4,000 voters would have to turn out Saturday for the school millage proposal to have a chance to pass.

Garfield, in speaking to some 43 groups and more than 1,000 individuals before the election, sensed a more positive attitude on the part of his listeners. Among the things that he and Assistant Supt. Marvin Fischer stressed to residents were the increased costs of running the school district.

Of the 8.5 mills requested, the first 3.2 mills, or $640,000, would be needed to keep programs at their present level, he said. The next 4.13 mills, or $826,000, would have been used to recall 45 teachers, rehiring 36 other employees and four administration staff members, with the remainder paying fringe benefits to employees.

Garfield said additional cuts would have to be considered if the millage failed. He listed the possibility of half-day sessions for grades 1-6; lay off of custodial employees and bus drivers and, if necessary, grades 7-12 may be cut to half days.

Legislators introduce bill to rewrite juvenile code

House Republican Leader Dennis O. Cawthorne (R-Muskegon) and Rep. Paul Rosenbaum (D-Battle Creek), the chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, have jointly introduced legislation re-writing the state's juvenile code.

The measure would greatly strengthen juvenile judges in dealing with youthful offenders and also would affect "status offenders", neglected children and parental rights.

According to Cawthorne, Wayne County Juvenile Judge James H. Lincoln has called the bill "...the best piece of legislation ... concerning juveniles in my 16 years on the bench."

If enacted, the measure would be the first major revision of the Juvenile Code in more than 30 years.

The Cawthorne-Rosenbaum bill was drafted by a broad cross-section of judges, educators, social workers, police officials and parents. It has been officially endorsed by the State Bar of Michigan, Michigan Congress of PTAs, State Secondary Principals Association, State Police and various other groups.

A key feature of the Cawthorne-Rosenbaum bill is that it gives juvenile judges the power to commit a juvenile delinquent to a state institution.

"Contrary to public impression, juvenile judges do not presently have that power," Cawthorne added. "Presently, in what Judge Lincoln calls the 'gut issue', social workers make the decision as to when, where, whether, and if, a delinquent will actually be committed once the judge finds that a youngster should be under state supervision. Thus under present '...social workers make the decision as to when, where, and if...'

law, the key decision concerning whether a juvenile is dangerous and should be removed from the streets is not made by the juvenile judge."

The Cawthorne-Rosenbaum bill would change that and permit juvenile judges to commit youthful felons over age 15 to up to three years in secure detention, a tool the judges feel they badly need. Detention would have to be in a facility separated from adult wrongdoers and could be ordered after a determination that the youngster could not benefit from rehabilitation programs.

The measure also would reduce current court involvement with "status offenders". Present law gives the juvenile court broad jurisdiction over numerous acts which would not be considered crimes, if committed by adults. Under the new proposal, the juvenile court would have jurisdiction over incorrigibles, truants and runaways only, if it can be demonstrated that voluntary community resources are not adequate for dealing with the problem.

"This provision should greatly lessen the court's occupation with such matters and allow it to concentrate on more serious matters," Cawthorne said.

The House GOP leader criticized some counter-proposals which would totally wipe out court jurisdiction over status offenses.

"That means the courts would have absolutely no power to deal in incorrigibles, truants, or youngsters who run away from home, even if the child were 8 or 9 years old and even if the parent wanted action taken to control the child," Cawthorne said.

Still another controversial point involves neglected children. The Cawthorne-Rosenbaum bill also would continue the present law's recognition that emotional neglect may be a grounds for the juvenile court stepping in to supervise a child.

The proposal also contains a model provision on the termination of parental rights, using language developed by a subcommittee of the National Council of Juvenile Court Judges. Under the proposal, probation and juvenile officers would have to meet new minimum qualifications. The measure also requires certain local and regional child care facilities be established and sets forth a broad array of rights for both children and parents.

Finally, the Cawthorne-Rosenbaum bill would provide for the destruction of records of minors in need of supervision on the minor's 18th birthday, or before by court order, and for the destruction of a juvenile offender's record on his/her 21st birthday, unless the judge orders them not destroyed or orders them destroyed before the 21st birthday. The minor would be notified that he/she could petition to the court for destruction of the records before the 21st birthday.

Romulus North JHS hosts spelling contest

Romulus North Junior High School, located at 37300 Wick Road, will host the Detroit News District Spelling Bee at 9 a.m. Wednesday.

Winners from the host school are Gina Toth, seventh grader and Diane Kautz, eighth grader who will compete with students from approximately 30 schools taking part in the spelling bee.

Officials for the event will be Stuart Hobbs, principal of the school, Sarah Modica and Mike Kirda. The pronouncers will be Linda Cook and Elizabeth Monette. The district chairman is Charles Kidwell, and the secretary is Ursula Von Glahn.

The winner of Wednesday's district spelling bee will move on to the Metropolitan Spelling Bee which will be telecast on WTVS, Channel 56, at 9 a.m. May 4.

"We're very happy to be hosting this spelling bee," Hobbs said. "We feel it is not only an honor but provides learning and enthusiasm to our school program."

Bill would help poor meet high fuel costs

Legislation to assist low-income families in paying high home-heating bills caused by the harsh winter was approved last week by the U.S. House of Representatives, with the strong support of Congressman William D. Ford (D-15th District).

The house amended a Supplemental Appropriation Bill by adding $200 million for Emergency Fuel Assistance, designed primarily to help senior citizens and the unemployed.

The past winter was one of the most severe in our nation's history, Congressman Ford noted. "Many families simply do not have the money to pay the resultant high fuel bills. The coming of spring for many of them will mean a shut-off of services due to unpaid bills.

"An elderly couple living on Social Security, or the family of a jobless worker trying to get by on unemployment compensation while he looks for work, often do not have financial reserves to pay unexpectedly high heating bills.

"In Michigan, heating costs for the winter will range up to $800, while in New England and the upper midwest, they will reach as high as $1,000. People living on small, fixed incomes simply cannot afford these unexpected bills on their limited budgets."

It has been estimated that some 2,000,000 households will be unable to pay the winter fuel bills, and that many of them may have their electricity turned off in April and May because of unpaid bills. They will then be unable to use their refrigerators, stoves, water pumps and lights.

Under the legislation passed by the House, Congressman Ford said money will be made available to the states for distribution to families on the basis of a formula designed to aid low-income families and elderly persons in areas where exceptionally low temperatures were recorded during the winter.

No payment exceeding $250 can be made to any one household, and any money not spent by June 1 will revert to the Federal Treasury.

Data processing: Best school class

An ideal high school class might be described as one that is fun, but at the same time challenging, offers practical skills and specific training for job opportunities.

A course at Romulus Senior High School that seems to fit the bill is data processing, offered through the vocational education program.

It is a course that trains students with skills they can use immediately after graduation, or that they can use when going on to further training in college or vocational schools.

This is the second year for the course, taught by Robert Beauchamp, but the class took on a new character this year when the school received data processing equipment. As teachers say: "The students seem to enjoy operating the computer much more than simply studying about it."

Doing actual computer work gives student specific job skills that train them for jobs they do immediately after graduation. Students gain an understanding of the workings of computer systems by actually writing, "de-bugging" and

*'I really got

executing programs. They use three remote computer terminals located in the classroom that hook up to the computer installation at the Wayne County Intermediate School District.

According to teachers, three types of students generally take the data processing courses. Some students hope to get a job in data processing-related jobs upon graduation. Others hope to go on to college to study computer science or programming. Others are simply curious about computers.

Most students have nothing but good things to say about the class.

"I took data processing because I wanted something new that I never had before," said student Robert Blanton. "I have never learned more in any other class."

Sherry Hensley commented that "last year I didn't even know what data processing was. I only took the class because my counselor suggested it."

"After I found out what it was all about, I really got interested in it, and wanted to make it my career," she added. "It's a lot of hard work, but a lot of fun, too."

Senior Laura Komyathy praised the class and the vocational education program, saying that what is important is that the courses actually train students for jobs.

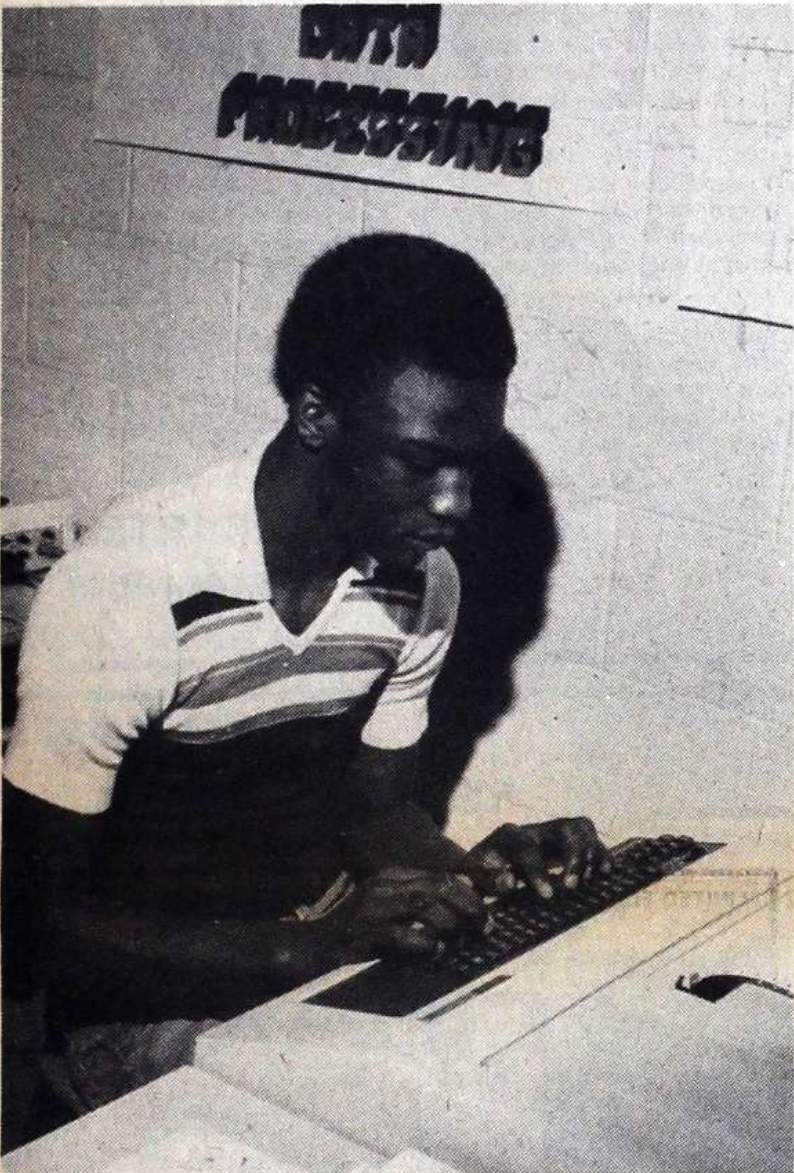

Ron Rafalski summed up the asset of the course that seemed to dominate all comments: "The reason I took data processing is because of the jobs available in the field. Computers offer great occupational opportunities, and they also are a great deal of fun."

A little help

Sometimes it takes a little help from your friends to do the things you'd like to do, and at Romulus Senior High School the help was close by for the band recently. The band needed $150 so it could attend the Livonia Band Festival earlier this month. The RHS Student Council came to the rescue and supplied the money for the trip.

where the band rated high in the competition. Turning over the $150 check for the trip were (left) Rod Hanna, Student Council advisor, and Margaret Brooks, Student Council president, while Band Club President Richard Smith and Band Director Ralph Miller received the check on behalf of the band.

And it's fun, too!

Data processing is one of the courses offered in the vocational education program at Romulus Senior High School. It trains students for jobs they can get into upon graduation, or prepares them for further college training in computer programming. This is the second year for the course, but the first year that students have had actual data processing equipment to use in the classroom. Darnell Morris demonstrates the equipment used in the classroom. Besides its vocational attributes, students claim that the class has another plus — it's fun, too!

It's beginning to look like the "Battle of the Blockade."

Romulus fire and safety officials have sent letters to Wellesley Townhouses, located at 35661 Smith Road, notifying them to remove the barriers that were installed blocking the entrance to Garner Street.

But so far, city officials say they've been shown little cooperation in their efforts to provide better fire protection to the residents who live in the cooperative apartments.

Because the townhouses are on private property, city and fire officials have had their hands tied in the past. But now with the recently passed Romulus Fire Lane Ordinance, Fire Chief John Wilhide and Director of Public Safety, Jerry Kubiak, feel they have the leverage to get the Garner Road blockade taken down.

Wilhide sent a letter to Thomas G. Sheppard, Wellesley manager, before the fire ordinance was passed by The Romulus City Council, informing him the Fire Department could not be responsible for the safety of the Wellesley residents with the poles blocking Garner Street.

Richard Zavodsky, head of the co-op's Board of Directors, sent back a letter asking Wilhide why the poles had to be removed from Garner and why the Fire Department couldn't use Smith Street, which was closer to the fire station.

Matters remained more or less at a standstill for months until the passage of the fire lane ordinance on Jan. 25, which gives the Fire Department the right to designate fire lanes even on private property.

The Fire Lane Ordinance, Section 2, reads in part: "Fire lanes shall be established, as deemed necessary at the following locations: a) apartment complexes; b) auditoriums; c) churches d) hospitals, convalescent homes, nursing homes, etc.; e) hotels, motels, boarding houses, etc. f) manufacturing sites; g) multiple private residential areas; shopping centers; h) office buildings and j) thoroughfares, road and streets too narrow for safe passage."

Fire Chief Wilhide sent a letter to Wellesley Townhouse officials dated March 9, notifying them that six streets within Wellesley's boundaries had been designated fire lanes by the city and included a copy of the Fire Lane Ordinance.

Designated as fire lanes were Whitehorn from Haskell to Smith; Garner from Wayne to Wahrman; Workman from Garner to Smith — west side; Grover from Wick to Garner; Gabriel from Garner to Haskell and Smith from Wayne to Wahrman.

The Fire Lane Ordinance allows a period of 30 days for Wellesley Townhouse officials to appeal the ruling and stipulates what procedures they can take.

Some 150 signatures of Wellesley residents were collected on a petition to have the Garner Street blockade removed, according to one Wellesley occupant.

Wilhide and Kubiak made a personal visit to the apartment complex on Monday to try and work out matters in a peaceful way, they said, but were told Sheppard was not in.

So, the "Battle of the Blockade" continues as the residents of Wellesley await the results.

In another development, the City of Romulus has taken Wellesley

Townhouses to court for allegedly not obtaining a building permit when having work done which required one.

RHS senior may net Merit Scholarship

Romulus High School senior Earl Mullins, an outstanding scholar and athlete and potential candidate for the U.S. Naval and U.S. Military Academies, is a finalist in the National Merit Scholarship competition.

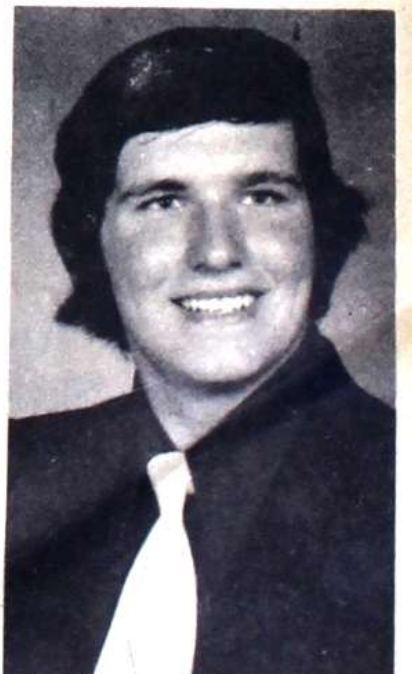

Mullins, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Mullins Sr. of Romulus, already has received a full 4-year Reserve Officer Training Corps (ROTC) scholarship to the University of Michigan. He has been nominated as a candidate for the Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md., and the Military Academy at West Point, N.Y.

Finalists in the National Merit Scholarship qualifying test represent the top half of 1 percent of the nation's most academically talented young people. They are considered for about 2,850 full 4-year merit scholarships, sponsored by corporations, foundations, unions, professional associations, colleges and universities.

Disabled veterans can get voc rehab training through VA

Veterans with service-connected disabilities of 10 percent or more may be entitled to training under the Veterans Administration's (VA) vocational rehabilitation program, and agency spokesman said.

Nearly 28,000 disabled veterans received training under the program in fiscal 1976, and 800,000 veterans have participated since World War II.

Veterans with disability rated 10 percent or more who are found to require rehabilitation can receive up to four years of training. Eligibility for training usually is nine years after discharge and under certain conditions this may be extended four years. A new law provides seriously disabled veterans training beyond these termination dates when this is found to be necessary, the spokesman noted.

Rehabilitation training may be taken at colleges, universities, vocational, technical schools, or by means of job or farm training.

If necessary, training may be taken in special facilities or in the veteran's own home.

Eligible disabled veterans applying for training will receive VA counseling to determine need for such training, and covering the veterans' desires, abilities and goals in identifying the most advantageous action.

VA pays for tuition, books and fees. Trainees receive a monthly allowance, and disability compensation also. Monthly checks recently were increased 8 percent, and single veterans training fulltime in school or college now receive $226 monthly. Veterans with one dependent receive $280 per month and those with two dependents draw $329 monthly. Trainees are paid an additional $24 a month for each dependent over two.

Veterans participating in VA's work-study program may work a maximum of 250 hours per semester (or other enrollment period) and earn a maximum of $624. Payment is at the rate of $2.50 per hour.

Get full details of the rehabilitation programs at the nearest Veterans Administration office or at any veterans organization office.

Romulus North band is 'perfect' host

Romulus North Junior High played the "perfect" host recently when its Symphony Band was the only musical group to get four superior ratings at the Michigan School Band and Orchestra Association District 12 Band Festival.

Director Richard Krause's Symphony Band was the only musical group of the 19 schools represented to receive a 1, or superior, rating from all four judges at the event.

North's Concert Band, also directed by Krause, just missed getting a one rating. After getting ones from the first three judges, the members slipped to a three in sight-reading and had to settle for a two rating, still a very high honor.

Although Romulus North Junior High was the only school receiving a perfect score, six other schools were given one ratings by the judges when they scored ones in three of the four categories.

Other Junior high schools receiving one or superior ratings were Plymouth West Symphony Band, Jeff Drifmeyer, conductor; Plymouth Central Intermediate Band, Mike DiCuir, director; Ann Arbor Slauson Concert Band, Speers Crumrine, conductor; and Petersburg Summerfield, Jerome Caviani, conductor.

"This is the best our band's ever done at a festival," said a happy Krause after the Symphony Band's March 12.

"Our concert band never has received any one, or first division, ratings from any judges before. This year we received three of them."

Krause said each judge rated the bands according to tone, intonation, rhythm, technique and interpretation.

"Our symphonic band received 17 A's and three B's out of the twenty categories rated," he added.

"I'm very proud of the performance of all our 150 band members. With the difficult fiscal situation confronting our schools this year, the students have been just magnificent. The students raised money to operate our band program at a full level.

"All our money for the Christmas Concert and the Band Festival was paid for by fund raising. Copy costs for special music exercises and money to transport students home who they could have after school rehearsals also came from fund raising."

Krause said fund-raising covered the complete cost of opening the school, operating the cafeteria and clean-up expenses for the festival.

"I thought we might have a chance to get a fine, first division rating, but with the many excellent bands at our site, I never thought we would be the only band to get all first division ratings."

'Open Meetings' should be a democratic principle

On April 1st, the 'Open Meetings' bill will take effect. This historic piece of legislation passed last year by the Michigan Legislature was designed for the purpose of eliminating secret meetings by elected officials. All decisions of a public body shall be made at a meeting open to the public. All deliberations of a public body constituting a quorum of its members shall take place at a meeting open to the public. A person shall not be required as a condition to attendance at a meeting of a public body to register or otherwise provide his name or other information or otherwise to fulfill a condition precedent to attendance. With but few exceptions, after the effective date of this new law, all meetings of a public body must be held in full view of the public with their participation unrestricted.

Grumbling politicians have already been heard, plotting to circumvent the new law. This reaction from those we have elected to represent us provides the answer to the question of why this type of legislation was necessary in the first place. While it is true that we have been fortunate enough to elect a number of dedicated public servants to office those few have usually been outnumbered by others, who seem to feel that the public is to be their servant. It is those people, who have been elected to public office and have chosen to represent themselves first, that have created the current enormous credibility gap that exists between elected officials and their constituency. This credibility gap is primarily responsible for the distrust that permeates our democratic society today. When the citizens of this country believe that politics is a dirty work, and that politicians are even dirtier, our society is in serious trouble.

The need for 'Open Meeting' legislation is an indictment of those who would conduct, or participate in closed meetings. It is also in large measure an indictment of the electorate of this country who would be so foolish as to allow people of less than the highest moral integrity, to represent them in public office. The new law is also an indictment of the individual who is just too busy to become involved, until 'it' might effect him. Maybe, as some politicians claim, the public deserves to be kept in the dark, as in the past, because they just do not care. We hope this new law will convince those who would take advantage of their public trust, that many of us do care, and many of us are watching. The 'Open Meetings' law will remove our elected officials from the back room.

On the brighter side

Calling Perry Mason ...

By JIM BRADLEY
ANP Staff Writer

Judges and lawyers have always been fascinating creatures to me. Perry Mason is one of my all-time heroes. There's not another lawyer like him. I thrill to the way he always gets his man, (er, person), especially when the camera shows each intense face. Then Perry points an accusing finger at the guilty party just before the person confesses.

I've also held judges in reverence ever since I can remember. Maybe it's just the sight of their impressive black robe that keeps me on the right track. But the man on the bench has always been an awesome judicial figure in my mind.

That's why I paused last week when I ran into Judge Thomas Smith of Westland's 18th District Court. Upon rounding a corner at Westland City Hall, I saw Judge Smith standing right in front of me in the main lobby. You might say he appeared out of nowhere. And that got me thinking.

When a person stands before the judge, it's referred to as "appearing before the judge." Last week, I think Judge Smith "appeared before me." Since I'm a god-fearing, law-abiding man, I knew I had nothing to fear. So why, then, did I still feel that sense of awe (twinge of conscience?) when "here come da judge"?

"Hi, Jim," Judge Smith said, a bright smile creasing his features.

"Hello, Tom," I replied, the words slipping out before I realized I should have addressed him as "Your Honor." What would he think of me calling him by his first name? Well, it was too late now. "I read your column all the time," he said, his words seeming to take on a somewhat authoritarian, stentorian tone.

Even as I acknowledged his comments about my writing, I felt a sense of mixed emotions. Why did he bring up my writing—was it because he really enjoyed it or was there some other reason? The thought struck me: "Judge for yourself!"

My somewhat sense of awe and "fear" of judges caused my mind to quickly whirl backward to when I was asked to be a witness in a court case. Council for the defense asked if I would testify about some newspaper stories I had written concerning a mobile home park. This happened seven years ago and the court case was important enough to be covered by Channel 7 television and The Detroit News.

Also involved were a state representative and other notables, including news media people. I know the case was a matter of grave concern, but I think I got a little carried away—what with watching Perry Mason so much, and all.

When I took the witness stand I thought I might be on TV, so I asked if I could turn the witness chair around to show my better side. "It's highly irregular, Mr. Bradley," the judge intoned, "but go ahead."

"State your name and occupation, please," I was told.

"Jim Bradley, mild-mannered reporter, Alias 'Fat Jim'."

"Did you write these stories in the Canton Eagle and Wayne Eagle?" defense counsel asked.

"Yes," I confessed.

"I object, Your Honor," shouted the plaintiff's lawyer. "These news stories are irrelevant, immaterial and not pertinent to the case."

(That's just what my managing editor had said when I wrote the stories!)

Knowing the TV cameras might be grinding away at any time, I kept a serious smile on my face and a look of proper decorum. I had worn a blue shirt which they say shows up best on the TV screen. The television reporter not only wore a blue shirt and a blue and gold tie, but he was also dressed in a blue sport coat with a large gold number 7 on it. (There's a smart aleck in every crowd!)

After the three-hour hearing, I expected to be besieged by the television cameras. I thought newsmen would thrust a microphone in front of my face and have me answer a barrage of questions in the glare of TV lights. No one even looked my way, I was completely ignored and the other reporters, who had covered the entire case, didn't even remember seeing me at the hearing. I guess I've just got that type of face. The most "forgettable" character I've ever met.

I was quickly brought out of my day-dreaming when Judge Smith firmly shook my hand. "Yes, Jim, I wanted to mention your column," he repeated. As a police car pulled up in front, I could only envision the following scene:

Two policemen get out and briskly stride toward us. The patrolmen grab me both by arms and start to lead me away.

"You're under arrest, Jim," I could imagine Judge Smith saying.

"On what grounds?"

"For impersonating a newspaper columnist," the judge charged.

It looks like I'm in real trouble now. Does anyone know Perry Mason's phone number?

Health Beat

The business office

By RUSS TUTTLE
Director, Community Relations
Peoples Community Hospital Authority

For the past two years, we have in this weekly column, used most of our allotted space to discuss professional health care employee-patient relationships.

This week, we interviewed the head of the second largest department in the Annapolis Hospital. It's a department whose personnel, for the most part, seldom have a one-to-one relationship with patients. Yet it's one of the vital operations associated with the hospital.

The reference is to the Business Office — a service comprised of 125 professionals.

The Business Office Manager, Denis Urbaniak, told us that one of his principal functions was to assure that patients get in and out of the hospital as efficiently as possible with a minimum of inconvenience as humanly possible under the constraint of the myriad of paper work required in today's health care delivery systems.

"The biggest challenge in rendering our service," he said, "is the almost daily problems presented by the various bureaus as they change or introduce new regulations and policies."

"Our admitting personnel, for instance, are constantly required to learn new procedures required by Blue Cross, Federal authorities, State authorities, Medicare, and Medicaid."

"Unfortunately, as the admission procedure is made more complicated for our personnel, then too the procedure becomes more complicated for the potential patient."

Urbaniak, who earned a BS in General Management from Wayne State University in 1967, has been with PCHA since 1973 when he was employed at the Outer Drive Hospital in Lincoln Park as the Assistant Business Manager.

In 1975 he was promoted to Business Manager at the Beyer Memorial Hospital in Ypsilanti, and in 1976 he transferred to Annapolis Hospital in Wayne.

From 1969 to 1973 he worked as Account Manager in Advertising and Display for the J.L. Hudson Co. where he coordinated the budget for the annual Thanksgiving Day Parade.

He said that in addition to smoothing out the admission procedure, his operation is deeply involved in cost containment efforts.

"Last year, Blue Cross unilaterally capped their reimbursement to participating hospitals at 110 percent of the previous calendar year charges."

This meant, then, that we are a participating hospital could only increase our total charges 10 percent more than the preceding year's charges.

But he said that through the introduction and close monitoring of new procedures Annapolis was able to satisfy the 10 percent limitation.

But he added an interesting comment. "People sometimes fail to recognize that the health care industry is a highly people-intensive industry. Just about 70 percent of our total budget is allocated for wages, salaries, and fringe benefits. This compares to most industries which run from 10 to 30 percent at most in 'people' costs."

"And," he said, "these large labor costs represent one significant component of the overall increase in providing health care."

Urbaniak's Business Office also maintains a patient financial service group which counsels patients who are experiencing any difficulty with their insurance carriers, or who must make arrangements to pay their own bill if they are uninsured or underinsured.

"We would not want anyone to think that we are heartless and without compassion," said Urbaniak.

"We understand that there are those times when people are a little short in their personal cash flow, and we are prepared to work out a deferred payment plan."

The conversation returned, as inevitably we knew it would, to the costs of providing services. "People expect a great deal more today than they did even ten years ago. And it's hard to argue that the modern hospital with its computers, its sophisticated equipments, its highly trained and skilled personnel represent a far greater level of service and care than we've ever experienced."

"However, as people expect and demand more, the costs must go up. There is no alternative."

He said that the annual payroll at the Annapolis Hospital, including over $1 million for fringe benefits, is approximately $13 million.

"That's what it costs us to provide the services that people have come to expect in a quality-oriented hospital," he said.

He said that Annapolis, as a member of the PCHA, was in a unique position in that it was one recipient of the 0.4-mi. levy assessed against the 24 member communities each year.

"This levy, really a very modest figure, can only be used under the terms specified in the bonding ordinance for new plant construction."

Thus it helps to reduce over-all cost of operating the hospital, and we are able to offer our services at somewhat lower costs than most comparable hospitals," he said.

While we are sure that no one wants to be a patient, it should serve as some consolation to know that if you use your community hospital, you will receive quality health care services at reasonable costs.

HOME ENERGY

The cost of fuel to generate electricity for one of Michigan's utility companies is three times greater today than in 1972. And the cost is expected to go even higher. Natural gas prices are going in the same direction.

"Let's use the sun to heat our homes. It's free." Well, that's easier said than done.

Solar energy sounds seductively simple. Just capture and convert the power from that big ball of fire in the sky and this planet's energy problems will be solved until the sun sets for the last time.

But it's not that simple. At least not with today's technology. The sun's energy CAN be captured and converted for heating purposes. However, the equipment needed to do the job is expensive and not 100 percent effective, particularly in a climate like Michigan's.

In fact, the Federal Energy Research and Development Administration (ERDA) estimates that installation of a solar energy system for a 1,500-square-foot residence in Michigan may cost up to $24,000 and would supply only two-thirds of the heating and hot water needs of the homeowner during normal weather conditions.

And this winter, as we have all seen, is far from normal.

A solar energy system requires large collectors to capture the sun's heat and a tank to retain that heat until it's used.

The collectors are panels covered with glass or plastic and are usually located on the roofs of buildings. The tank is usually filled with water to hold the collected heat.

ERDA estimates that, for a Michigan residence, three 8-foot-high rows of collectors would be needed, each 33 feet long.

The tank would have to be 48 inches in diameter and 200 inches long with a capacity for 1,500 gallons.

Piping, pumps and other equipment would also be required in the system. ERDA says such a system could cost as little as $8,000 for a 1,500-square-foot Michigan home or as much as $24,000.

"Even though the solar system's costs are rather high," an ERDA publication notes, "a number of factors tend to make the future of solar heating and hot water systems look good."

These include the rising prices of oil, gas and electricity, and the expected decrease in solar system costs as better production techniques are developed. In addition, design and installation costs will decrease as experience in those areas is gained.

In Michigan, as in most other sections of the United States, a solar heating and hot water system would need to be supplemented by an auxiliary, conventional system.

That's because a Michigan building owner would get only 66 to 71 percent of his energy needs from the solar system. Climatic factors such as cloud cover, humidity and wind affect the ways in which solar systems are useful.

In the winter months of December, January and February, the system would be expected to provide only about half of the energy needs.

Solar units are also being contemplated at electric generating plants. They would provide the heat to make the steam that turns the electric generator.

One method would have the power collected in space by huge satellites and then beamed back to the earth by laser.

However, these large-scale collection techniques are still in the "what if" stage, but ERDA has been spending more than $100 million a year on solar energy programs, looking for cheaper ways to "let the sunshine in."

BUYING A CAR? 1977 Gas Mileage Guide put out by the Environmental Protection Agency will enable you to consider fuel economy when making the decision on which model to buy.

The guide lists the autos alphabetically by manufacturer with the following information: Engine size (in cubic inch displacement), number of cylinders, automatic or manual transmission, type of fuel system, interior volume index (cubic feet in passenger and trunk spaces), fuel economy (miles per gallon in EPA tests in city and highway driving and an average based on 55 percent city driving and 45 percent highway driving), and average annual fuel cost in dollars (15,000 miles at 65 cents a gallon for gasoline or 55 cents a gallon for diesel fuel). 'Peaches and Gravy'

By JOHN KEASLER

The name for a mixed metaphor, I have decided, is a metafar. Whatever you want to call them, Bernard Oleze has the world's greatest collection.

A metafar isn't the metaphor it started out to be:

"He's got a memory like a hawk."
"Yeah, you said a handful."

These are beautiful examples of this beautiful art form. Oleze, a distinguished colleague of The Miami News, handed me the small pamphlet he and a stockbroker friend, Tom Clarke, put together...and I have been laughing ever since.

The title is "Peaches and Gravy."
(From one of many beautiful managled cliches included: "Well, life isn't always peaches and gravy.")

I'm not even going to try to explain the ground rules for what constitutes a metafar. Anybody who needs an explanation wouldn't understand the explanation anyhow.

That can be taken as a compliment either way, as a certain form of insanity is needed to understand this finely honed medium.

"He's running around like a chicken with its wings off." — Fair!

"This is like shooting birds in a barrel." — Good!

"Don't try to make a mountain out of a mole hole." — Excellent!

All of these go right to the particular fey quality and go straight as a whip. To explain would be like filling teeth. And if I even tried to explain I would just be walking in with both feet open. It would leave me as weak as a dog.

Those examples, and scores of others, started in Manhattan where Oleze was a graphic arts director and Clarke was stockbroking. They, and a couple of other friends, just couldn't let great lines go to waste.

Such as: "I'm waiting, but I'm not holding my fingers."

Or — a favorite — this: "You're out of your rocker."

The deceptive simplicity is what I like. For it takes a while to figure out what's wrong with a certain line.

"He's like a duck out of water."
And you're never really sure if anything is wrong, or precisely what it is, anyhow.

I think Oleze should get together with his buddy and get up a book of these by a national publisher, particularly since he could do the cartooning himself.

Can't you just see the cartoon for the following?
"It was just a one hick town." Or:

"He got the promotion. It was a real plum in his hat."

None of these, Oleze said, are made up ... and I agree, after trying, that it's almost impossible to make them up. They just happen, so if readers know or overhear any, please send me your favorite metafar.

I like this brisk statement:
"Okay, men, let's get the stick on the road!"

I doubled-up and rolled-over, and laughed so hard on that one "the tears ran down my eyes."

Try these:

"He doesn't have a dime to rub together."
"Be careful — the guy punches behind the belt."

"He's a problem in my thorn."
"Darnit, don't sit there like a sore thumb!"

It's not easy to come up with a good metafar.

"It's like taking candy on the one hand and putting it on the other."

"Let dead dogs sleep."

So, put your head to the grindstone. I'll be waiting high and low (Actually, I said that off the back of my head) Put your hand where your mouth is! Don't be asleep at the gun. You bark bigger than you bite! Saved by a hair! It's two of one and a half dozen of the other...

I'm fighting a dark horse. But, that's what makes the world tick. Thank you lucky blessings. And remember! I always pay top banana!

Thank you for donation

To the Editor:
Dear Mr. Lyos,
On behalf of the Edgemont School PTO, I would like to thank you and Phil Brigandi for the sausage that you donated and prepared for our Annual Pancake Supper.
This year we served 834 people, making it our second highest total ever. Your involvement in this year's Supper guaranteed that it would be a fabulous success. The results will benefit the students of Edgemont School and you, as a caring component of the community are to be commended.
Again - special thanks — and if you are willing we would look forward to your involvement again next year.

Politicians, unresponsive

To the Editor:
The recent survey concerning capital punishment was very informing. We now know that our representatives don't always do what the majority of their constituents wish.
Religious reasons for not executing make an agnostic such as myself ill. The chances of an innocent person being put to death are nil. As for the ignorant, ethnic minorities etc. being executed, they are committing the crimes aren't they?
The deterrent factor is really not relevant, we are ridding society of our human mad dogs.
I want my legislators to push issues which his backers are in favor of. We don't need people in Lansing that vote their conscience.
May he rest in peace, but one Phil Hart is enough.

It was a tough winter

Gentlemen;
We have just been through a very hard winter and I am not alone I know when we all wish for spring to arrive. I have had a bad case of the "blahs" and by chance I came upon this poem which gives promises of spring.
(Spring)

If winter comes, the poet says
Can Spring be far behind?
We'll just keep on our winter tasks
Till we the answer find
For this we know, 'neath winter snow
And waiting to spring forth,
Are crocuses and daffodils

To gladden our sad earth.

From lilies grace to pansy's face
And sprinkled in between,
The largesse of a governed world
And foliage of green.

This I confess, as you may guess
I'm all agog for Spring,
I'll walk a mile, climb any stile
To hear the robins sing.

I feel this poem gives hope and gladness for the sounds of the first robin, the first buds on the trees; the first real signs of Spring. We've been through the bad weather; but now "Bring On the Spring".

Sincerely
Mrs. Stan Venclewicz

Assessor was misleading

Did you vote "NO" for the recent school millage because of potential reassessment of your property? If so, you may have been duped by City Hall. This campaign worker approached city officials in June, 1976 seeking information for use during the then five mill school millage proposal. Those requests fell on deaf ears as the reassessment was promised.
It is nine months later, that reassessment has not taken place, and I seriously doubt that it will with the summer election machines starting. Who will vote for a mayor who just raised their taxes?
City officials have vetoed the millage by threatening reassessment, and residents believed them, failing the March 19th school millage proposal.
Nearly 75 percent of all Romulus property taxes are paid by industries who are already at maximum assessment. This leaves 25 percent of city property for "revaluation". That property belongs to you and me. If the value of that property is increased 10 percent the school system would realize a 2.5 percent increase in revenue, far short of the 10 percent revenue increase necessary for school operation due to changes in State Tax Laws, State Aid, and inflation.
City politicians have appreciably affected the operation of our public schools. This, in and of itself, is a regretful event for this city and its residents. City politicians (and others soon to be vying for residence in Romulus' glass house) popped for votes by chastising school administration fiscal policy after the fact.
I am not defending school administration, they've made some blunders, but those same politicians have let them, and then sanctimoniously sit in judgment. Or, more correctly, tried to turn the mistakes of others into profit for themselves. Making a profit is tricky when you haven't made an investment. It is time city voters recognize the trend.
And a brief reaction is necessary for our city assessor's statement in a recent publication of this paper.
The Romulus Reporter, it was said, was "misleading" in comparing property values to income to determine tax liability. Actually, our unsigned assessor was misleading.
The Romulus Reporter was 100 percent accurate within the framework defined in that document. Homestead property taxes are capped at 60 percent of the amount you pay over 3.5 percent of your household income in 1976. You receive a direct reimbursement from the State for amounts paid over that cap.
Our well meaning city assessor was campaigning for votes for his elected boss it appears.

With all the insanity above, a more positive statement is in order. Sincere thanks to all who supported the millage drive; including some politicians.
The vote difference is not insurmountable. The issue will come to the voters again, and its urgency will be no less critical.
The Romulus Community Schools must operate on a balanced budget, they must negotiate with five unions who have no contract, and meet the increased costs of fuel and supplies that we all share.
Romulus Schools must operate while unsure of the financial effects of a 15 month fiscal year in 1977, and meet mandatory guidelines from the State Board of Education for services offered.
The issue is not as simple as many of us wish it were.
Schools throughout Wayne County have tried millage hikes and many have failed. Schools cannot wait for reassessment, a higher State Income Tax, or federal relief to bail us out.

Our children, yours and mine, need all of their education now. These are facts of life.

A vacant building has no value

To the editor:
Since our Belleville hospital closed its seems as though the buildings have been vacant for quite some time. I think if we are not going to reopen the hospital we should put the building in use.
The building and the site is the ideal spot for our city building. If not that, maybe a Medical Clinic, or child care center, or maybe a training center, but I think a city building would be great.

I don't know how many floors the hospital consists of but my idea was:
1. Police Department first floor etc.
2. Driver licesence, etc.
3. Doctor's office, Lawyers, etc.

Faye Price

P.S. Really I think we should try to consider reopening our hospital. I think every community like ours needs one.
The children, the patients at the nursing home etc.

From the State House

A State Tax Snafu

A few months ago the Michigan Department of Treasury interpreted some rules of this year's state income tax returns and, in doing so, touched off a controversy.

When taxpayers saw them there was a rising tide of complaints. I have suggested that taxpayers not fill out this section of the household income definition that includes the new rules.

The biggest complaint comes from Treasury Department instructions that taxpayers must include insurance premiums, even those paid by employers, as part of their "household income". The premiums themselves would not be taxed but they would become part of household income in computing property tax credits. Higher household income usually means a lower tax credit or refund. The net result is more taxes paid.

I was one of the first legislators to bring this matter to the attention of the Department and other interested legislators. I feel that the interpretation was bureaucratic arrogance and a policy-making decision that should be reserved for the legislative branch.

Many constituents have been totally confused and forced into a position of not obeying a law because of this obvious misdirection on the part of the Department.

One of the first bills approved by both the House and Senate in the new session would nullify this unpopular rule, making it a matter of law that insurance premiums not be included in household income.

In addition to coming to the aid of those with employer-paid insurance, the bill would allow persons who buy their own health, accident or life insurance to deduct that cost when figuring their income for property tax relief purposes.

Another section of the bill requires that the House Taxation Committee and the Senate Finance Committee be informed by the Treasury Department of any future changes in tax instructions.

If the Senate agrees to the House amendments in the bill, it will be sent to the Governor. He is expected to sign it.

Once the bill is signed into law, persons who have already filed their state income tax returns will be able to file an amended return to get whatever extra money is coming to them. Those who have not yet filed returns will be able to simply ignore the insurance premium instructions.

It has been argued that the Treasury Department instructions are almost impossible to comply with and may be almost unenforceable. Most taxpayers have no way of knowing exactly how much their employers pay for their insurance; employers are not required to compute or supply that information to employees. Therefore, the amounts of individual premiums would have to be guesses on the part of taxpayers.

Other than that, the rule would be a tremendous loss for taxpayers. Estimates of how much individual taxpayers would lose run from $8 to $50. Taxpayers would lose millions of dollars in credits and refunds. Those losses are estimated to be anywhere from $4 million to $16 million. This could even include loss of refund money by senior citizens.

Maybe this summer

By GEORGE R. PLAGENZ

Maybe this summer...
Maybe this summer we'll know for sure whether there really is a boat atop Mt. Ararat in Turkey — and, if there is, whether it is Noah's ark.
Maybe this summer we'll know ... and maybe not.
For 2,500 years — off and on — people have told stories of seeing the ark on the 17,000-foot Biblical mountain. Marco Polo mentioned the existence of the ark in the 13th century.

There are even stories that a Russian party found the ark in 1916 and went aboard, taking many pictures.

Their report to the czar supposedly included descriptions of hundreds of small rooms and some large ones.

Unfortunately — so the story goes — a few days after the report reached the czar, his government was overthrown by the Bolsheviks and the reports were subsequently lost.

The members of the expedition currently hottest on the trail of the ark bear little resemblance to Marco Polo and his band of explorers. They belong to a small, fundamentalist religious settlement in Palestine, Texas, known as the Holy Ground Mission.

When they leave for Turkey in June or July they will be embarking on their ninth expedition to Mt. Ararat since 1971. Last summer eight members of the mission returned from the mountain with a photograph of what appears to be a huge boat resting on a ledge in a glacial mountain pass 10,000 feet up the rugged elevation. The photo appears in the new movie, "In Search of Noah's Ark."

The picture was taken with a telephoto lens 1,600 feet from the object. A steep chasm has thus far prevented the search party from getting any nearer to the "ship" — if it is a ship. This summer the expedition members will go to Ararat equipped with pick axes, rope and other mountain-climbing equipment and attempt to scale the precipice from the gorge below.

If they make it, they hope to go aboard what they firmly believe will turn out to be the ark referred to in the book of Genesis in the Bible.

So confident are the mission explorers that they will reach the ship that they are taking a saw along to cut off pieces of wood from the boat. They will bring the wood back to this country and have it tested for age.

In 1955 a French industrialist named Fernand Navarra returned from Mt. Ararat with a five-foot piece of wood which he said he had cut from a 150-foot beam jutting out from the frozen surface of a sub-glacial lake.

Dark with age, the wood displayed evidence of having been hand-tooled and impregnated with bituminous pitch. Tests at Bordeaux University in France judged the age of the wood to be about 5,000 years. This would put it roughly in the time of Noah.

In 1969 Navarra climbed Ararat again, under the sponsorship of an exploration group known as the SEARCH Foundation. He led the party to the site of his initial discovery, where additional samples of wood were excavated. SEARCH had hopes of making further explorations to Ararat following the 1969 ascent but politics always interfered.

While Turkey is a U.S. ally, its government is extremely sensitive to Russian fears that any organized group of searchers on Mt. Ararat will be spying on the Soviet Union, just across the Turkish border.

The Holy Ground Mission explorers avoided this government red tape by going to Turkey and making friends with the people who live on the mountain, known as Kurds.

These natives pointed out places on the map where tradition said the ark was located and gave whatever assistance they could to their visitors from the United States.

It was once believed by scholars that the story of Noah and the flood had no historical foundation whatsoever.

Now one theory is that there may have been a gigantic flood at some time in history which submerged the then known world. This would account for why every culture has its legend of a great global flood that destroyed all civilization.

Whether there ever was a Noah's ark is, of course, another question. Nevertheless, the finding of a wooden boat high above the timberline on Mt. Ararat — where trees have never been known to grow would pose a major puzzle for modern man. One question will be, If it isn't Noah's ark, what is it?"

My Turn

On Capital Punishment

Of the ANP staff

MAUREEN RADEMACHER

The growing grassroots movement favoring reinstatement of the death penalty in Michigan is a desperate effort by a desperate society to somehow put a stop to senseless killings and brutal crimes that are making Americans afraid to venture from their homes.

Citizens see it as a "last ditch effort" to stop murder, because "something has to be done".

It is true that people are afraid to walk the streets in their own neighborhoods. It is true that society must do something to protect itself. It is true that citizens should not have to live in fear of their lives.

But in our opinion, it is not true that capital punishment would do any more to make society any safer, any freer or less crime ridden.

In weighing the pros and cons brought out in the series of stories we have written on the death penalty, we do not see "legalized murder" by the state as any kind of solution to rising crime. The road to freeing society from fear will be a lot longer, tougher and more complex than merely erasing the constitutional amendment prohibiting the death penalty.

Citizens are going to have to face up to the difficult task of strengthening and enforcing their laws on gun control, establishing mandatory sentencing, coming up with money to build prisons, and reviewing judicial and penal systems.

We hope that the same energy is expended toward these tedious, and less flashy issues, as has gone into the push toward capital punishment.

Much as citizens would like to believe otherwise, the death penalty has not proven to deter crime. States with the death penalty do not have lower murder rates than states without it.

On the other hand, mandatory sentences have been shown to be a crime deterrent. Wayne County Prosecutor William Cahalan has quoted some startling statistics of drastic decreases in armed robberies, assaults with a firearm and homicides with a firearm after a law of mandatory 3-year sentences for conviction of a felony committed with a firearm went into effect in Florida.

Another factor to be considered in doling out the death penalty is the probability that poor and nonwhite persons, unable to afford expensive legal aid, would most often be sentenced to die. Unequal application of capital punishment makes it a possible tool of discrimination.

But what is really at issue in our minds when discussing capital punishment is the morality of legalizing murder by the state as a punishment for murder by the individual.

In this case, we believe it is true that "two wrongs don't make a right". If we are condemning a person for killing, we are contradicting ourselves by turning around and murdering in return.

Much of the sentiment for capital punishment is, we believe, based on revenge. The death penalty will not bring back a loved one, but it will give us a satisfied feeling that we've gotten even.

It would be a dangerous thing to legalize "getting even".

And even if we could be assured that no innocent person would ever be executed, we couldn't go along with capital punishment. The execution of an innocent person is not the issue. The execution of any person is the issue.

If we give up our attempt, however imperfect, to be a fair and humane society, we give up that quality that makes us different from other animals. We would feel a little less proud of being human beings, if we condoned legalized murder.

Many have referred to capital punishment as a last resort. But we do have alternatives, ways to get our criminal justice system working better.

Although most people spend their time worrying about murders committed by lunatics on killing sprees, crime statistics back up the fact that some 50 percent of all killings are among families.

The number of murders could be drastically cut by stringent gun control laws. That would mean that a fight between two men over a card game may result in a punch in the nose instead of a shotgun blast in the head.

We believe mandatory sentences for violent crimes, and a strict gun control laws, are just two ways, there probably are more, to accomplish a far better record of crime deterrent.

Mandatory life sentences, without parole, for murderers who might otherwise be executed, is another alternative.

In addition, we feel that many juries deciding murder cases might be reluctant to return guilty verdicts when they know the result could be death for the defendant.

We share the frustration, and the helpless feeling that many citizens have over growing crime. But the death penalty is not going to solve the problem. "Doing something" — the wrong thing — out of desperation can do more harm than good.

At New Boston-Flat Rock site

Metropark to add 18-hole golf course

A new $1 million 18-hole golf course will be built at Willow Metropark located between New Boston and Flat Rock in Huron Township, with the public opening expected sometime in 1978.

Initial construction of this new $1 million facility now is underway and is expected to take 1½ to 2 years to complete to the point that public use can begin. The course is located north of West Road covering about 385 acres within the 1,500 acre

Willow Metropark, with the entrance at Huron River Drive and West Road. The course is expected to eventually attract 40,000 or more golfers a year, with prices competitive with other courses in the area.

The course will be constructed, maintained and operated by William K. Newcomb, a golf course designer, of 116 East Liberty St., Ann Arbor, through a 35-year lease agreement with the Huron-Clinton Metropolitan Authority. The course will revert to complete authority operation at the end of the lease and option period. The authority estimates it might receive approximately $240,000 in the first 10 years of the operation while providing a first-class golf course for public use.

The aim of the agreement is not only to provide a major new facility for public use, but also to help provide revenue to the Huron-Clinton Metropark system that has only limited funds for new major recreation facilities.

The 18-hole golf course will be of championship quality and will be maintained at the high standard of operation set by the authority at its other courses — such as the 18-hole at Kensington Metropark near Milford and the 18-hole "Par 3" course at Lower Huron Metropark near Belleville, which opened in 1961.

Facilities will include a practice-putting green, practice driving range, a starter building with food service, automatic irrigation system and other services needed for a golf course operation. In order to provide additional recreational facilities, the authority has (1) encouraged private enterprise to provide the money and to construct new recreational facilities at the Huron-Clinton Metroparks and have professionals to operate a facility for the benefit of the public using Metroparks, (2) established lease agreements covering funding, construction and operation of facilities ranging from 25 to 35 years and (3) utilized authority tax dollars to provide other non-revenue producing facilities and/or for the purchase of land for future Metroparks.

Two other projects involving the private sector and the authority include the development of an 18-hole golf course at Stony Creek Metropark near Utica, also expected to open in 1978, and the new Kensington Children's Farm which opened this past August at Kensington Metropark near Milford.

Change in jail site could be costly

...the jail at the planned site adjacent to Greektown would attract undesirables to the area...

A waste of at least an estimated $1 million would be lost to Wayne County taxpayers, if the planned location of the proposed new county jail is changed to suit protesting Greektown merchants and the Central Business District Association (CBDA).

That is the word from the Wayne County Board of Commissioners, which meet with Diane Edgcomb, CBDA president, and about 12 others March 17. The meeting was with the board's Jail Construction Subcommittee.

The merchants argued that the site presently under consideration would cause ruin of business in the area and destroy an important downtown attraction in Detroit.

The group added that the jail at the planned site adjacent to Greektown would attract undesirables to the area, add to traffic congestion and parking problems and discourage tourists.

Pointing out that the proposed site was agreed upon two years ago, and the Board of Commissioners is obligated to build a new jail as soon as possible, Subcommittee Vice Chairman Arthur M. Carter said he doubted that the site would be changed before construction begins as scheduled next month.

He added that he did not believe a new jail in the area would destroy Greektown, and that opponents of the present plan failed to present proof enough to require a sudden and expensive change at this "11th hour".

However, both Carter and another county commissioner, Ervin A. Steiner Jr., agreed that Greektown is an important feature of Detroit, and that the merchants, city and county officials should coordinate to resolve potential parking problems, and to help preserve and attract business to the area.

The 5-member subcommittee also called on M. H. Ashley, the county director of buildings under the Board of Auditors, to provide cost estimates of a possible change to the alternate jail location proposed by the Greektown merchants and the CBDA.

Ashley said that change to any new site would waste at least as much as the $1,050,000 already spent on the present design alone.

In addition, he predicted that necessary soil tests and redesign for a new location would cause a 1-year delay, during which time inflation costs in the construction industry amounting to "the usual 7 percent per year" could boost total additional expense as high as $3 to $4 million more.

A complete redesign would be necessary, said Ashley, because the design already completed would not fit the alternate location proposed by opponents of the present plan, which has approval of the full Board of Commissioners, the Sheriff, State Correctional Officers and Circuit Court Judges.

The approved construction site is more than two acres, while the business group's alternate location is only 1.7 acres.

Carter said the Board of Commissioners became "pressured" to quickly build a new jail when a 3-Judge Circuit Court panel ordered strict control against overcrowding at the present jail, and when county voters in the Presidential Primary Election last year approved a millage proposal for additional jail facilities.

The approved site for new jail construction is one block south of the present jail at St. Antoine and Beaubien, and the location preferred by the merchants is two blocks away from Greektown bordered by Gratiot, Miller, St. Antoine and the Chrysler Freeway.

hamburgers or hot dogs, sweet potatoes, rolls, fruit cup and milk, followed by John Marzetta, buttered vegetable, bread, pineapple cup and milk.

Next Wednesday the cafeterias will be serving fish squares with tartar sauce, baked corn, rolls, mixed fruit cup and milk, while roast beef with rice and gravy, baked beans, bread, peach cup and milk will be on tap for next Thursday.

Closing out the week will be a menu of pizza with meat and cheese, cabbage salad, bread, fruit cup and milk.

The menu Monday at Early Elementary School will be cook's choice, while chili and crackers, fruit salad, cinnamon rolls and milk will be on tap for Tuesday.

Next Wednesday the lineup will be oven-fried chicken, mashed potatoes and gravy, fruit Jell-O, bread and milk.

Next Thursday the cafeteria will be serving spaghetti, carrots and peas, peaches, rolls and milk, with fish on buns, french fries, orange juice, ice cream and milk rounding out the week.

'Gesundheit' Why bless a sneeze?

Why do we say "gesundheit" when someone sneezes? Why do we take notice of a sneeze at all? Well, we just do, and have been doing it for thousands of years.

The early Christian church tried to convince its members to pay no attention to sneezes, but people went right on saying things like "Salve" (Latin, "Be Healthy!") or "Asusa" (Hebrew, "Health!") or "Bonne sante" (French) or "Evviva" (Maltese).

Blessing a sneezer or wishing him or her good health probably started because people feared a sneeze was dangerous—a chance for the spirit to leave the body. The ancient Persians prayed after sneezing. So did the ancient Hebrews, asking bystanders to bless them. Mohammed thought well of sneezers, however, and told his followers to bless the sneezer as a tribute to Allah.

Many other beliefs surround a sneeze: If you hear a sneeze while praying, you certainly must begin again. Some Germans think it's bad luck to sneeze while putting on shoes.

Most people also believe—rightly—that a sneeze often is the first sign of a respiratory infection. If there are other symptoms, as well, like coughing and shortness of breath, better see a doctor.

That's the advice of the American Lung Association of Southeastern Michigan.

Michigan Consolidated asks for rate increase for 1978

In order to maintain sufficient gas supplies for its customers, while paying rising costs of labor, taxes and construction programs, Michigan Consolidated Gas Co. has asked state approval of new rates for 1978 which would increase the typical bill for a customer who heats his home with gas by about $1.50 per month next year.

The request was filed with the Michigan Public Service Commission (PSC) last week.

"Ours was one of the few heavy industrial states in the nation where not one job was lost this winter because of natural gas shortages," said Michigan Consolidated President Charles R. Montgomery. "I am proud of the fact that Michigan Consolidated had gas supplies adequate to keep people on the job while thousands in other regions of the nation were temporarily unemployed due to natural gas shortages."

"It is our goal to continue acquiring adequate gas supplies in the future to keep people employed and the state's economy growing. But to do so, we need to maintain a sound financial position in order to attract investment capital."

Montgomery said the recent increases in the company's rates have resulted entirely from increases in the prices it pays its pipeline suppliers for gas. Otherwise, there has been no increase in Michigan Consolidated rates since 1975, he added.

"Inflation has affected us just as it has affected everyone," Montgomery continued. "We are paying more for everything we buy."

The requested 1978 rate increase reflects increases in the wages Michigan Consolidated pays its employees, increases in the cost of materials and supplies, higher interest on the company's mortgage bonds and higher taxes.

Under the proposal, residential customers would pay about 4.5 percent more next year for gas service while large volume users would pay approximately 13 percent more.

Montgomery said the utility must seek rate adjustments, which would increase the company's revenues by $110 million annually, now in order that they can be placed in effect on Jan. 1, 1978.

Montgomery said about $33 million of the requested increase represents increases in taxes and depreciation charges. An additional $16.5 million is needed to meet rising labor costs and for other operating costs, including materials and supplies.

Michigan Consolidated also needs $4.1 million to cover increased cost of additional facilities including replacement of gas mains. Most of the balance is due to increased capital costs and discontinuance of temporary sales, primarily boiler fuel for power generation.

Montgomery said some $5 million of the requested increase would be used to create an emergency reserve of about 20 billion cubic feet of gas. This gas would be stored to meet emergencies such as disruption of normal supplies from pipelines or for sale to other utilities in the state which might be facing emergency shortages.

"With the increase, it will cost about $285 a year to heat a typical home with natural gas," Montgomery said. "To heat the same home with fuel oil would cost about $555 annually. And it would cost more than $1,200 to use electric resistance heating."

Even with the new rates, present rates charged by 19 other utilities — out of the 30 gas companies which serve the nation's 25 largest cities — are higher than Michigan Consolidated's proposed residential heating rate.

The average increase to a typical residential heating customer would be about $19 a year. Thus, the typical annual bill for heating, hot water, cooking and clothes drying would rise from $400 to $419 under the new rates, Montgomery said.

Under the existing rate structure, Michigan Consolidated charges its residential heating customers $2 for 1,000 cubic feet of gas. The proposed new structure would bring the rate up to 10 cents per 1,000 cubic feet over today's rate. The proposed rate structure would raise firm industrial rates from $1.80 to $2.03 per 1,000 cubic feet and would raise commercial rates from $1.92 to $2.18 per thousand cubic feet.

Montgomery said Michigan Consolidated's rate filing does not include the cost of operating and maintaining storage capacities not needed to meet the requirements of its own customers.

This storage capacity, he said, is being used to provide about 41 billion cubic feet of gas storage annually to out-of-state gas companies. Since it is an interstate business, the Federal Power Commission has assumed jurisdiction over the storage service. The out-of-state companies receiving the service pay for it at rates established by the FPC. Therefore, Montgomery said, Michigan Consolidated has excluded all cost of operating the storage service in its filing with the MPSC.

WCISD distributes funds from special education tax

Nearly $19 million in special education funds has been distributed to the 36 school districts in the Wayne County Intermediate School District for 1975-76 and 1976-77 programs.

The money comes mostly from a 1-mill special education tax, approved by the voters in 1974, which produces a total of $13.2 million annually. An additional $2.2 million is from state special education funds and the total is augmented by earned interest and a small carryover from 1974-75.

Special education funds are distributed by the intermediate district according to a formula approved by local school districts in the county.

The 1976-77 funds, $5.2 million, are being paid out now with the approval of the Board of Education of the intermediate district because of cash flow problems in the schools.

The exact amount due each school district will not be known until all required reports are received and adjustments will be made later.

Some of the special education funds are retained by the Wayne County Intermediate School District to pay for countywide programs serving children from all local school districts.

School districts and the special education funds they received were:

- Cherry Hill, $124,393 in 1975-76 and $51,001 in 1976-77;
- Garden City, $318,241 in 1975-76 and $130,479 in 1976-77;
- Huron, $85,647 in 1975-76 and $35,115 in 1976-77;
- Inkster, $81,624 in 1975-76 and $33,466 in 1976-77;
- Plymouth-Canton, $281,958 in 1975-76 and $115,603 in 1976-77;
- Romulus, $97,779 in 1975-76 and $30,500 in 1976-77;
- Van Buren, $170,443 in 1975-76 and $69,882 in 1976-77;
- Wayne-Westland, $911,984 in 1975-76 and $373,913 in 1976-77, and
- Wayne County Intermediate, $3,246,697 in 1975-76.

Bills would strengthen refuse disposal control

State Rep. Edward E. Mahalak (D - Romulus) has introduced a package of bills to strengthen state and local controls over garbage and refuse disposal.

The legislation would transfer responsibility for the solid waste management program from the Department of Public Health to the Department of Natural Resources, which in turn would certify city, county and district health departments to help administer the program on the local level and enforce state law.

The bills would require that garbage and refuse trucks licensed under local ordinance carry a seal to show that they also comply with the provisions of state law. This would further ensure that the haulers are meeting state standards, Mahalak said.

Kelley issues Open Meetings Act opinion

Extends right of public to observe

Michigan Attorney General Frank Kelley has issued a 34-page opinion clarifying the new Open Meetings Act, slated to take effect next Thursday.

According to Kelley: "The thrust of the act is that all discussion of public issues by public bodies must take place at meetings that are open to the public. While this state has a history of enlightened laws and attorney general opinions requiring open meetings, this act extends the right of the public to observe and participate in meetings of public bodies in several ways."

Those ways are:
—The act broadens the definition of public bodies that must hold public meetings and narrows the occasions when they may meet in private.

—The act is more specific in detailing the rights of the public to attend meetings of public bodies.

—The act requires public bodies to allow all persons to address a meeting of that body.

—The act gives enforcement powers to members of the public and imposes meaningful penalties on public officials who violate the law. This is especially important because the former open meetings law was frequently ignored and did not provide penalties for violations, Kelley said. This act provides both specific and adequate penalties for enforcement by both the attorney general's office and the public.

Kelley's clarifying ruling consists of two sections. One summarizes the provisions of the act and the other contains 32 questions that may have been raised about the act by state legislators and agencies and the answers to those questions.

The rulings in the second part include:

—All employment interviews that a public body conducts itself must be held at a public meeting. This point is addressed at three places in the opinion. Specifically, Kelley rules that: the Michigan Employment

Security Commission must hold public interviews for all positions upon which the commission has reserved final decision to itself, interviews for positions where the public body is not required to interview the applicant may be conducted in private by staff of the public body, interviews for the position of school superintendent for K-12 schools must be held in public.

—A motion to call a closed session must be approved by a public roll-call vote of two-thirds of all members of the public body appointed to and serving, not merely those attending that particular meeting. Kelley also ruled that a meeting could only be closed for the specific purposes provided in the act and that no other reasons were permissible.

—Meetings of public bodies by the means of conference phone calls are prohibited by the Act. Kelley ruled that even if it were physically possible to include the public in a conference phone call meeting, the intent of the act would not be observed.

—All persons have the right to address a public meeting. This right may be reasonably controlled by rules recorded by the public body. These rules may include a time limit and a requirement that a person identify himself and give advance indication that he wishes to speak.

—A situation, such as when members of a public body meet socially or meet to address a civic organization is not a public meeting within the definition of the act unless designed to avoid compliance with the act.

Remedial reading program accepts admission forms

Applications now are being accepted for admission to the summer remedial reading program at Madonna College in Livonia.

The Psycho-Educational Center accepts both elementary and high school students in its 5-week session, which uses an individual approach to improve reading skills.

"Since each student is evaluated individually prior to admission, early application is important in the admission process," said Sr. Mary Martina, Ph.D., director of the Psycho-Educational Center. Remedial exercises are then prescribed to improve identified learning problems. Evaluations are being conducted now through May.

The instructional program, which may be in small groups, or on an individual basis, begins June 27, meeting five mornings each week through July 29.

This is the 25th year of the Madonna College Psycho-Educational Program. For further information, call Sister Mary Martina at 425-8000, Ext. 48. Madonna College is at the corner of Levan and Schoolcraft in Livonia.

Griffin legislation would aid chemical disaster victims

U.S. Sen. Robert Griffin of Michigan has introduced a $150 million legislative package to aid victims of toxic chemical disasters, such as the PBB contamination of some Michigan livestock and food supplies.

Griffin's bill would not only provide federal funds to offset severe economic losses suffered by farmers, but would help pay medical bills of persons made ill by such chemical contamination.

"We must not wait another toxic chemical accident to consider piecemeal remedial action," said Griffin, Michigan's senior senator. "We should act immediately to ease the suffering of those who are now, or someday may be, the innocent victims of toxic chemical disaster."

The 1976 Toxic Substances Control Act established safeguards against the widespread use of potentially harmful chemicals. But left unresolved was how to assist those harmed by toxic substances.

Griffin's bill would amend that law by:

- Allowing the federal government, through the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), to pay up to 75 percent of the cost to any state that reimburses its farmers for food or livestock condemned because of toxic chemical contamination.

- Authorizing EPA payments to individuals for medical expenses in the detection and treatment of toxic chemical-caused injury or illness, if they cannot afford it or have insufficient health insurance.
- Providing the EPA grant authority for facilities to monitor and detect substances believed to be injurious to the public health.

Griffin's bill would authorize $50 million this year and in each of the next two years to carry out the program. The legislation would be retroactive to Jan. 1, 1973.

While there is no question that the development of new chemical substances "has improved significantly our social and economic well-being," Griffin said, there always is the possibility of severe harm to the environment and to human health through chemical accident.

"And the sad fact is that in such a chemical accident, just as is the case in disease and crime, the innocent victim is the one who suffers the most," he said.

In 1973, for example, Congress refused to aid poultry farmers in Mississippi whose flocks were decimated by the chemical Dieldrin. Millions of chickens had to be destroyed.

That same year, a fire retardant known as polybrominated biphenyls (PBB) was mixed accidentally with livestock feed in Michigan and distributed throughout the state although the error and its severe effects were not recognized for many months.

Michigan Gov. William G. Milliken and the State Legislature are seeking to make certain that Michigan food supplies are free of PBB contamination and to repay farmers for their losses. The estimated cost is pegged at "a staggering $22.6 million," Griffin said.

There already are some 200 civil suits pending in Michigan against the alleged polluter, but long court delays are probable with no assurance that there are sufficient private funds to make full repayment for losses.

"Thus, it seems that a state-federal assistance program should be established to meet present and future chemical contamination problems," Griffin said. "It is safe to assume that the next toxic chemical contamination problem could occur in any one of our 50 states. We should be prepared to handle such an occurrence expeditiously."

On Feb. 21, Griffin introduced another bill to deal with Michigan's PBB problem and similar chemical accidents. It would provide low-interest government loans of up to $250,000 for affected farmers.

"We need these bills to provide both short-term and long-term disaster aid to our citizens," he added. "I will devote every effort to secure adoption of this program."

Farmers converge on D.C.

While Congress deliberates on the future of the National Farm Program, more than 100 Michigan farmers will arrive in Washington, D.C., Monday to participate in the 17th annual Washington Legislative Seminar, sponsored by the Michigan Farm Bureau Women.

Of the 118 farm men and women participating, 57 have been selected as legislative leaders, based on their involvement in policy development and legislative activities in their home communities. Belleville resident Charles Paas of 16280

Martinsville Road, will serve in one of those 57 positions during the seminar.

Through informal discussions with their congressmen, the legislative leaders plan to surface several agricultural issues, including the National Farm Program, energy needs, export control, common sites picketing, land use and the Michigan PBB situation.

Joining Paas on the trip to Washington will be his wife, a member of the Heritage Group.

Handicapper's Riding Program initiated

A unique program has been initiated for handicappers in Wayne County. A pilot county program, Wayne County 4-H Handicappers Riding Program, occurred the fall of 1976. Handicapper riding has two main benefits; emotional and physical. Through riding, a balance, posture and coordination. The county program operates under the auspices of the State 4-H Program which is made possible by a joint grant from Kellogg and the Mott Foundations in cooperation with the 4-H Foundation.

At the present time, Wayne County is neglecting a certain segment of the population — namely the handicappers. The opportunities available to handicappers are the same in which "normal" audiences participate, but there is a problem of involving the handicapper in projects and activities dominated by the "normal" person.

Horseback Riding for Handicappers helps to bring a 4-H "learn-by-doing" concept to handicappers in Wayne County. As an extra plus, handicappers, even those turned off by school, are offered a positive learning climate through the program, by a volunteer, informal, out-of-school setting.

Two problems often confronted by handicappers are: 1) lack of recreational activities and 2) unconscious or conscious ostracism from society resulting in a lack of self-confidence.

Besides providing an obvious recreational activity, the riding program provides a normalizing medium which allows the handicapper to enter the "normal" world. When a person is on a horse, he/she is basically ten feet off the ground. Some of the students have never been without their wheelchair or their crutches. The horse becomes the handicapper's equalizer. When on a horse, a "handicapper becomes aware that for the first time he/she can be mobile and independent of other people and mechanical aids" (a quote from a volunteer).

As stated earlier, lack of self-confidence is a main difficulty when planning programs for handicappers. The concept of therapeutic riding is based on the idea that if you can introduce a person to a situation where he/she is doing things that other people can do, and if he/she is, in fact, doing things that some people have never done, that person's self-confidence cannot help but improve.

The riding program, because it is a 4-H activity, also introduces the handicappers to 4-H. It gives them the opportunity to join a club or establish a new one. Every 4-H opportunity becomes available to handicappers; from projects in pets and photography through crafts, ecology, floriculture and vet science. Local, state and national events, besides trained leaders, educational materials, workshops, seminars, fairs, fun events, and friendships become available to handicappers through 4-H.

Besides the recreational and psychological benefits, riding has another important aspect. Horseback riding has been seen as a form of therapy since 1954 when Norah Jacques started a program in England. Muscle exercises and movement that are difficult on a physical therapist's table, can be attained when in the context of learning a skill such as riding. Therapeutic riding favorably affects balance, posture, coordination and fine and gross motor movement.

Every instructor in the riding program receives intensive training under the direct supervision of Lida McCowan, executive director of Cheff Center for the Handicapped, the world's largest therapeutic riding center. Safety factors are an integral part of this training.

Volunteers are given a training session and horses are intensively screened so that only the most suited to the needs are used. As each type of handicap demands, specially developed safety equipment is used, while sidewalkers accompany the inexperienced rider until balance is attained.

The handicapper is never on the horse without an instructor or volunteer within easy reach. It says much for the program that in 15 years has never had a serious accident. In addition, therapists and doctors working with each student fill out an assessment sheet, allowing the instructor to plan the lessons according to the needs and restrictions of the students.

Among those ready to teach is Cathy Bies of Belleville who will join last fall's teacher, Ede Valiquette, as instructor for the spring session at Mr. Riddle's Circle R Ranch in Romulus. There are over 30 volunteers now but since the program is expanding, there is a need for even more workers. Volunteers may call Myra McInerney at the 4-H office in Wayne, 721-6576.

It is important to know that the student is taught to ride, he/she is not just taken for a ride. If at all possible, the student grooms and does the various tasks associated with the horse. It's more than just a one hour novel experience. The student learns a skill and begins to participate in a sport. However, riding is not a panacea. It must be pursued in a professional manner.

By using treatment goals, progress notes, and meaningful evaluation, there is evidence that coordination, balance, muscle tone and perceptual motor skills have been greatly improved in many riders. Perhaps another plus is the possibility of employment as the individual gains the skills of horse management. The riding arena was donated. Local people loaned their horses and volunteers came from all over the county. Equipment for horses and kids was rented from the State 4-H Office.

As mentioned earlier, a nine week pilot program was conducted in the fall of 1976. Twenty-five handicappers were involved in the program. Disabilities included cerebral palsy, general muscle weakness, blindness, mentally retarded, hearing impaired, emotionally disturbed and learning disabilities. All students received five 2-hour sessions a week. This session included a riding lesson and a stable management session. The stable management session is very important. It teaches the handicappers that with the privilege of riding and owning a horse, comes the responsibility of grooming, feeding, housing, etc.

The spring 1977 program will be enlarged to accommodate up to 60 handicappers. It will be an 8-week program and will utilize approximately 12 horses, 50 volunteers and an additional instructor.

Students will become 4-H members and be able to demonstrate their new skill at the Special Olympics. The stable management portion will be expanded to include visits to local stables and vets and demonstrations of jumping and dressage.

The pilot program, as mentioned earlier, was funded by the Cerebral Palsy Association of Detroit, local 4-H clubs and the state handicappers riding office. It is hoped that the community will take an active role in support of our future programs. After a permanent facility is secured, maintenance funding will be available from Title III monies of the Intermediate School District, fund raisers and support from local organizations.

NOTICE!

SHAMPOOING VERSUS STEAM-CLEANING

Which way cleans better? Which is better for your carpet? The companies that have steam-extraction equipment say steam is much more thorough and gentler on your carpet. The people that have shampoo equipment say that you can't really get a carpet or anything else cleaned without scrubbing action. Which ones are telling you the truth? They BOTH are! But they each push in one direction favoring the type of equipment and system they use.

Douglas Carpets has no quarrel with either the shampooers or the steam cleaners. We have ALL the necessary equipment and the trained technicians to clean your carpet the way it should be cleaned.

Do you want the very best? Call Douglas Carpets at 697-9137. Here is what we will do for you:

1. Apply a mild shampoo solution with a rotary brush scrubbing machine that gently massages the dirt to the top of the carpet.

2. Use the steam extraction principle with a powerful wet vacuum to thoroughly flush out all the dirt and shampoo residue. (When this operation is finished, over 92 percent of the moisture will be out of your carpet.)

3. Reset the pile of the rug in the direction the fiber was designed when the material was new.

When this process is completed, you will have a beautiful carpet that will stay cleaner longer than ever before. Let me make a simple illustration of the use of both methods. When you wash your clothes in a washing machine, you (A) use soap (B) agitate or scrub, and (C) rinse out the soap residue.

If you are going to have a first class cleaning on your carpets, you will have to do the same thing. (A) Use shampoo. (B) scrub or agitate the carpet, and (C) rinse out the shampoo and dirt residue.

At Assembly of God

BHS grads exchange vows

MR. AND MRS. GARY B. LITTLE

The First Assembly of God in Belleville was the setting March 5 for the six o'clock ceremony which united Linda M. McCarthy and Gary B. Little, both of Belleville, in holy matrimony.

The Rev. David E. Pace officiated the doubling ceremony while Mrs. Norma Mays accompanied herself at the organ as she sang "O Promise Me." Bouquets of carnations, gladiolas and chrysanthemums graced the altar for the happy occasion.

The bride is the daughter of John J. McCarthy Sr. of 1355 John Hix, Westland, and Mrs. Peggy Britt of 711 Savage Rd., Belleville. The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Billy Little of 44324 Bemis Rd., Belleville.

Carrying a colonial bouquet of roses, carnations, daisies and baby's breath, the bride was escorted up the aisle by her father. She was gown in an Alencon lace creation styled with a boat neckline, long fitted sleeves and a full skirt with a large satin bow accenting a peek-a-boo panel at the back.

Her silk illusion veil was held by an open work queen's tiara of seed pearls and iridescents.

The bridegroom's sister, Sherry Lou Little, was maid of honor in a mint green gown patterned with tiny pink flowers. An oval neckline and puffed sleeves were styling details on the toe-touching gown. Her picture hat was encircled with a mint green ribbon and her bouquet contained yellow roses, carnations, daisies and baby's breath.

Wearing yellow versions of the honor maid's ensemble were the trio of bridesmaids: Linda Jones, Teresa Little and Tina Sweat. All the gowns in the wedding were made by the bride.

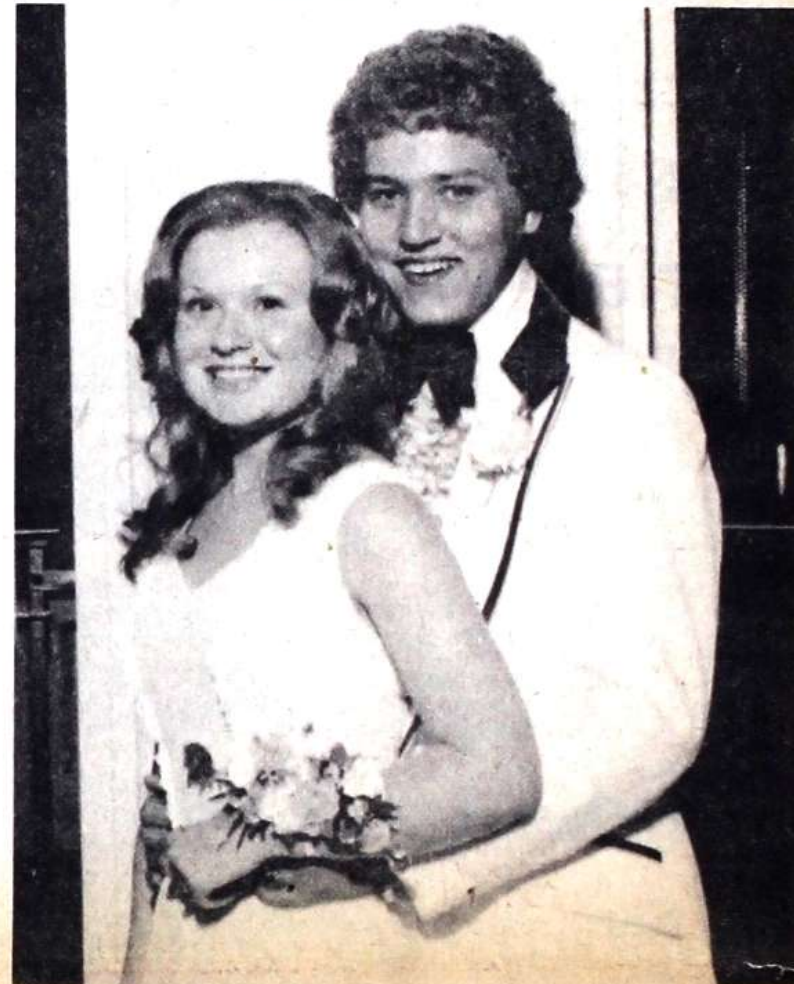

Jean McCarthy and John J. McCarthy Jr., sister and brother of the bride, were dressed as miniature copies of the bride and groom.

Timothy Caves was asked to be best man. Chris Laskowski, Paul Smallwood and David McNeil carried out the duties of groomsmen.

At the reception which followed in the church parlor Mrs. Britt, the bride's mother, received in an emerald green polyester A-line gown with long angled sleeves. Mint green chiffon was the choice of the bridegroom's mother.

The newlyweds, who are planning a trip to Colorado in the fall, are now making their home at 36782 Ellis Rd., New Boston.

Both young people are 1976 graduates of Belleville High School. The bridegroom is currently employed at John Elden Chevrolet in Belleville.

They're engaged

A wedding early in 1978 is being planned by Cynthia Lee Mae Farmer and Robert Charles Stewart Jr., both 1976 graduates of Belleville High School. Their engagement is announced by the bride-elect's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Dewey Carlton Farmer of 10548 Jackson St., Belleville. Miss Farmer is currently attending Pontiac Business Institute in Royal Oak where she is majoring in executive secretarial work. She is to graduate in August. The prospective bridegroom, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Charles Stewart Sr. and Mrs. Janice Morris of Greenfield, Ohio, is a nursing assistant at the Greenfield Municipal Hospital.

At Home Arts Club

Micro-wave cooking demonstrated

A home economist from Mid-West Demonstrators of Royal Oak, Mary Carol Hoeltzel, was the featured speaker March 14 at the Home Arts Club meeting. She spoke on the advantages and conveniences of micro-wave cooking while using a Litton Micro-wave Oven to prepare a variety of foods.

She explained the mechanics of the electrically computerized oven as she baked a four-pound stuffed chicken, which took a mere eight minutes per pound to cook.

In a matter of minutes, she had a batch of peanut brittle ready to cool and serve and then prepared a casserole using raw macaroni, ground round, tomato sauce and various other ingredients which she had ready to serve in 15 minutes. Her pineapple upside-down cake was turned out and cooling in eight minutes and in just seven minutes there were fresh asparagus and baked potato to accompany her main course.

Members and two guests, Charlotte King and Sheryl Tate, were invited to sample the finished products and to ask questions.

At a short business meeting conducted by Beverly Eichold, the group discussed the annual May banquet. Frances Jobe of the program committee announced that The Fogcutter in Ypsilanti had been selected for this year's dinner party. The group voted for a buffet style meal which will be held May 9.

The nominating committee chosen by the president for the April election will be headed by vice-president Charlotte Price. Avis White, Eula Haft and Murial Wolfe will assist.

The evening was concluded with grasshopper pie and iced tea served amid St. Patrick's Day appointments by Avis White and Lee Smith.

Because of Easter week, the April meeting will be held one week earlier than usual, on April 4, in the home economics room of North Junior High School. Guests are welcome.

CC secretaries meet, Discuss job placement

The monthly meeting of the area's Chamber of Commerce secretaries was held at the Hillside Inn of Plymouth with Janet Curlee of the Plymouth office as hostess.

job placement market.

Other secretaries attending were Joyce Wheeler of Westland; Donna McEachern of Wayne; Mary Dingledey of Canton and Leona Van Buhler of Belleville.

We perform at least 85 services for a funeral

We handle a myriad of details for each funeral to meet the special wishes and needs of the family. As funeral directors, we often help out for several months after the funeral to make sure all details are completed.

It is important for funeral directors to consult at length with the family on literally dozens of details. Here are just a few of them:

FUNERAL: setting its time and who is to officiate; choice of casket and clothing, music, Scriptures, etc.
CEMETERY: purchase of lot or opening of family plot; getting permits.
NOTICES: arranging death certificates, obituaries, notifying fraternal (or other) groups, distant relatives.
FUNERAL DAY: organizing service details; helping conduct service; providing family cars and organizing procession.
CLAIMS: helping family file for Social Security, military, union or insurance benefits.

Any of the 85 service details can cause grief when not handled right. We have to give EVERY funeral 110 percent of our time and attention to perform a service which comforts and fulfills the family's needs.

Moss-Bachman wed; Travel to Bahamas

Double ring vows between Diane Rose Bachman and Stephen Miles Moss were solemnized Feb. 26 at Sts. Simon and Jude Catholic Church in Westland.

The Rev. Andrew Nieckarz presided at the four o'clock ceremony before an altar appointed with two vases of white and pink carnations. The nuptial rite united the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Bachman of Hannan Road, Wayne, formerly of Belleville, and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Allan Moss of Fairchild, Westland.

Walking to the sanctuary with her father, Diane appeared in a toe-touching lace gown designed with a square neckline and long sleeves accenting the little fitted bodice. A tiara of baby pearls and lace secured her bridal veil while cascading white carnations, pink baby roses and baby's breath completed her ensemble.

Maid of honor Denise K. Mason of Westland donned a pink dress with a companion floor-length burgundy cape trimmed with pink fur. Her bouquet was comprised of white carnations, pink baby roses and red baby's breath.

Bridesmaids in identical outfits were Brenda J. Bachman of Wayne and Carol Moss of Westland, sisters of the bridal couple; and Denise Allen of Westland.

Best man was Jim Gladden of Wayne and groomsmen were Jim Foran, Jack Guinn and Dave Bates, all of Westland. Ushers were Dennis Erhart of Belleville and Bill Gladden.

Mrs. Bachman chose for her daughter's wedding a long-sleeved pale orange gown to which she pinned her corsage of white and pink carnations. A similar corsage was presented to the bridegroom's mother who wore a floor-length lavender gown for the occasion.

Some 150 guests greeted the newlyweds at their wedding reception which followed in the church hall. They later departed for a week-long honeymoon on Paradise Island in the Bahamas and are now making their home on Warren Road in Westland.

The new Mrs. Moss is a 1976 graduate of Wayne Memorial High School now employed in the offices of Vic Tanny International in Dearborn. Her husband is a 1972 alumnus of Wayne Memorial High School currently employed at the Detroit Bulk Mail Center in Allen Park.

The rehearsal dinner Feb. 25 was hosted by the bridegroom's parents at Elias Brothers Restaurant in Wayne.

Just like Grandma's

A much-missed friend from childhood can provide an old-fashioned ending to a happy meal. The convenience and simplicity of this Chocolate Rice Pudding makes it almost too nice to pass up. The recipe combines two favorite puddings from those remembered visits to "grandma's house" — rich chocolate and creamy rice. (Photo courtesy Jell-O Americana rice pudding.)

For your recipe file

An old-fashioned ending

Most of us have wonderful recollections of puddings. At a visit to Grandma's a perfect meal was topped off with rich chocolate or creamy rice pudding. Sometimes both were served and wasn't it wonderful to mix the two and savor every mouthful of your special blend? If you yearn for this old-fashioned, memory-stirring delight of your childhood, take heart. Chocolate Rice Pudding combines your two favorites in quick and easy fashion. New Jell-O Americana rice pudding is creamy pudding textured with rice and flavored with a delicate hint of spices. It's ready to enjoy in a matter of minutes.

Chocolate Rice Pudding is prepared on top of the stove. You simply add semi-sweet chocolate squares to the basic rice pudding. Before you know it and in about the same time it took you to set Grandma's big dining room table, dessert is ready.

Taste it and remember what an old-fashioned ending to a meal was all about.

Chocolate Rice Pudding

- 2 cups milk
- 1 package (3-1/4 oz.) rice pudding
- 2 squares semi-sweet chocolate

Measure milk into saucepan. Add contents of pudding pouch and the chocolate. Cook and stir over medium heat until mixture comes to a full boil. Remove from heat. Cover pan and cool 15 minutes. Stir well. Serve warm or chilled. Pudding thickens as it cools. For creamier pudding, place plastic wrap on surface of pudding while chilling. Garnish with prepared whipped topping and sprinkle with cinnamon or nutmeg. Makes 2 cups or 4 servings.

To Serve Warm: Prepare as directed above, bringing mixture to a full bubbling boil. Cover and cool 15 minutes; stir well.

Planters great accents in homes

Indoor gardening is hardly a brand new notion. Long before central heating became common, American housewives delighted in nursing a few favorite plants through the winter. Today, plants and planters have become more popular than ever before, according to Mary Ann Wills, interior design consultant for a leading manufacturer of decorative accessories.

"The possibilities for using greenery to enhance various living areas seem to be almost unlimited," she observed. "If you'd like a change of pace for the usual locations such as window sills, coffee and end tables, book shelves, or mantel-piece, for example, just consider where you might use wall planters to advantage."

Hang-up planters are now available in a range of sizes, shapes, and styles to blend with practically any decorating scheme. Several intriguing new designs recently introduced by Burwood Products Company, Traverse City, Michigan, make the choice even wider.

Some of these new planters are attuned to the Country Rustic look

One example is the Barnwood Slat planter, which duplicates the texture of knotty weathered timbers. There's a deep-dimensional harvest bouquet in the center while artificial philodendron spills out of a full-width trough, across the base. Reproduced from a hand-carved original design, the new simulated wood wall planter is finished in mellow antique pine tone.

While some Burwood planters incorporate water-proof containers that can hold live plants and soil, most are intended primarily for decorative effect.

Home repair—new service for area's senior citizens

By MAUREEN BEATTY

Home Repair is a relatively new service offered to seniors by the Wayne County Office on Aging. This program, established in October 1976, was inaugurated with the hope of assisting all senior citizens of Wayne County, 68 years of age and older, with a limited income of $3,500 or less a year, in maintaining their own homes. Seniors must own and reside in the home being repaired.

Service is limited to $100 a cost for materials, with no charge to seniors. Labor is supplied under a different grant, also with no charge to seniors.

Talking with Frank Rembisz, a social planning and developing assistant for the Office on Aging, the need for such a program becomes clear.

"All too often, when seniors are unable to maintain their homes, they must turn to their grown children for residence or become institutionalized," Rembisz said. "With their home in good repair, these seniors same often can live productive lives where they feel most secure, in their own homes."

There now are 250 requests on file for assistance, with another 50 to 60 repairs already completed. Repairs so far have covered such things as roofing, faucets, windows, steps, etc. Steps in good condition are very important. Seniors must have a safe entrance and exit, and faulty stairs could cause an accident.

The repair program, however, is having trouble with lack of funding. Donations were asked of business, both private and industrial, but the response has been minute. A proposal has been made for a grant under Title III of the Older Americans Act, which would provide much needed funds. If the proposal is accepted, the Home Repair Program will have at its disposal $20,000 for materials and $5,000 for tools. It also is hoped a parttime coordinator could be hired.

We still need the help of industry and private citizens. All donations are tax deductible and the Wayne County Office on Aging will provide a statement for tax purposes. There also is a pickup service available for all donated tools and materials.

To make donations or for further information on the Home Repair Program please call 224-0952.

Exhibit looks at fate of Pompeii residents

"The Last Days of Pompeii", focusing on the fate of the cities and people buried when Mount Vesuvius erupted in 79 AD, is the new exhibition at Cranbrook Institute of Science, 500 Lone Pine Road, Bloomfield Hills.

Volcanology, archeology, geology and the lives of the people who lived in Herculaneum and Pompeii are explored through the diaries and letters of Pompeii residents during the disaster; replica of a body cast of a young woman who died during the disaster; photographs and slides; and glass, pottery and bronze artifacts.

The exhibition, which is open through December, is open during regular Institute hours—10 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays, 1 to 9 p.m. Saturdays and 1 to 5 p.m. Sundays. Admission is $2.25 for adults, $1.25 for students and senior citizens.

Exhibited are Pliny the Younger's letters, the only eye witness account of the phenomenon, which detail Pompeii's plight and describe the blackened, scorched and cracked cinders and stones falling on the city, the blazing of Mount Vesuvius, the earthquake shocks, sea animals held captive on dry land and the darkness and fire that enveloped the area.

Also exhibited are excerpts from a bundle of papri found in a cistern and written by Gaius and Julia, an otherwise unknown Pompeii couple, who recorded their frivolous, vain and decadent lives and the beginning of the disaster. Written with a mixture of soot and wine dregs, Gaius' notes mainly outline his carousing nightlife.

Julia wrote in sepi of serving dinners of brain pate, shelf fungus, broiled turtle doves and stuffed vine leaves; being fitted for six gowns at once; going to plays; and being borne to a picnic in litters by slaves.

Final entry, by Julia (Gaius was in a brothel at the time), is dated August 24, 79 AD and reads:

"Fairwell, Gaius. The statues are toppling. The gods are striking down their images. Soon it will be our turn, mine and the children. If only you..."

Examples of long-ago graffiti, painted on exhibition walls as they appeared in Pompeii before the disaster, are: "Lovers, like bees, enjoy a life of honey," "Welcome and come in. Beware the dog," "Sautranus, Goodbye" and "October 10th, I preserved the olives."

The exhibition explains how Herculaneum, buried in a mudflow, and Pompeii, buried in ash, were excavated and what was preserved in each. A relief map shows the geography of the Herculaneum-Pompeii-Vesuvius area.

The Honorable G. Mennen Williams, State Supreme Court justice, will narrate Aaron Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait," played by the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, at a special tribute to the Late Sen. Philip Hart March 29.

The 8 p.m. concert in Ford Auditorium in Detroit will benefit the Sen. Hart Memorial Scholarship Fund established at Lake Superior State College in Sault Ste. Marie at his request prior to his death.

First Lady Rosalynn Carter will attend as a special guest of the senator's widow, Jane Hart. Senators, congressmen and Michigan dignitaries also will attend the concert, which is open to the public.

The orchestra will play Barber's Adagio for Strings and Dvorak's Symphony No. 8 in G major during the first half of the program, under the baton of conductor-in-residence Paul Freeman.

Sen. Hart's daughter, Ann, a mezzo soprano, will sing three arias from German operas — "Ging heut Morgan uber's Feld from 'Lider eines Fahrenden Geseelen' by Mahler; and two by Handel, Lascia ch'io pianga from "Rinaldo" and Sorse infausta una procella from "Orlando".

The memorial concert is one of several fund-raising activities for the $250,000 scholarship fund endowment launched by a special volunteer committee, headed by Gov. William G. Milliken Justice Williams and Mayor Coleman A. Young.

Tickets for the concert are on sale at Ford Auditorium and may be purchased at the box office or by mail. Checks should be made out to Lake Superior State College-Hart Scholarship Fund.

Tickets cost $5, $10 and $50, the latter including a reception for the First Lady.

RESTAURANT REVIEW

by Lee Smith, ANP's Roving Connoisseur

Chicago Road House

Named for the highway which once was the main artery between the Windy City and the Motor City, the Chicago Road House combines a pleasant atmosphere with choice cuisine — both at prices the average diner will appreciate — particularly so if he takes advantage of "Early Bird" specials.

Served Monday through Saturday from 4 to 6 p.m., the early bird dinner menu has just one price — $4.95! Your waitress will hand you both the regular and EBD menus, though, so you're able to choose from either listing.

Unbelievable these days of instant-inflation? Not at Jack Valian's attractive restaurant in West Dearborn where you can opt for Boston scrod, Chicago club broil, tenderloin tips, barbecue beef ribs, hamburger steak, New York strip, fish of the day or special of the day.

Start your dinner with Senate Bean Soup or, if it's Friday, you might prefer New England clam chowder.

Tossed green salad, mashed potatoes, green peas and bread accompany the entree. And that's not all — ice cream, tea and coffee are included as well!

Since the Road House is anxious to inform an unsuspecting public that it can still dine for a reasonable sum in elegant surroundings, we did a little sampling ourselves. The seafood platter (highlight of the day) was comprised of deep fried frozen shrimp, perch and scallops. The fresh frozen scrod, delicately dusted with paprika, was gently broiled to a moist, flakey turn — a very tasty fish.

Others had beaten us to the chowder pot so we had bean soup — a nice-sized bowl of ham-based broth thick with navy beans, celery, carrots and onions. A delicious beginning for any meal.

Our salads (almost too much for the plates on which they were served) were crunchy-crisp mixed greens with red cabbage, cherry tomato and slivered radishes, carrots and cucumbers added.

A white linen napkin kept our half loaf of French bread hot in its basket. Butter came on a plate in a good thick chunk — hurray! There are no substitutes, so only mashed potatoes are served as are green peas (unfortunately, canned.)

Melanie, who took charge of our table, gave us a choice of chocolate sauce or creme de menthe for our vanilla ice cream finale. She also kept our coffee cups full and teapots replenished. On the regular menu, you might like to know, coffee is still only 35 cents and unlimited.

We were seated in the largest dining room — the Chicago Road House — which is flanked by the Tiffany Room, the Salina Room (titled after Valian's first restaurant, The Salina Steak House), the Senate Room and a recessed and spacious lounge.

An interesting collection of art — paintings, prints, drawings — accents the walls which are paneled one place, bricked in another. Tiffany glass adds a colorful touch to the open pane-work which forms dividing walls around the bar area.

Then down the hall is the 1-year-old Loop Room — delightful spot to sip a cocktail and dine on everything from flaming shish kabob to chateaubriand (from the regular menu only.) Salad and baked potato come with the entree but be sure to look over the ala carte items — fresh California asparagus, broccoli, stewed tomatoes, buttered leaf spinach, zucchini, etc. — if you're a vegetable lover.

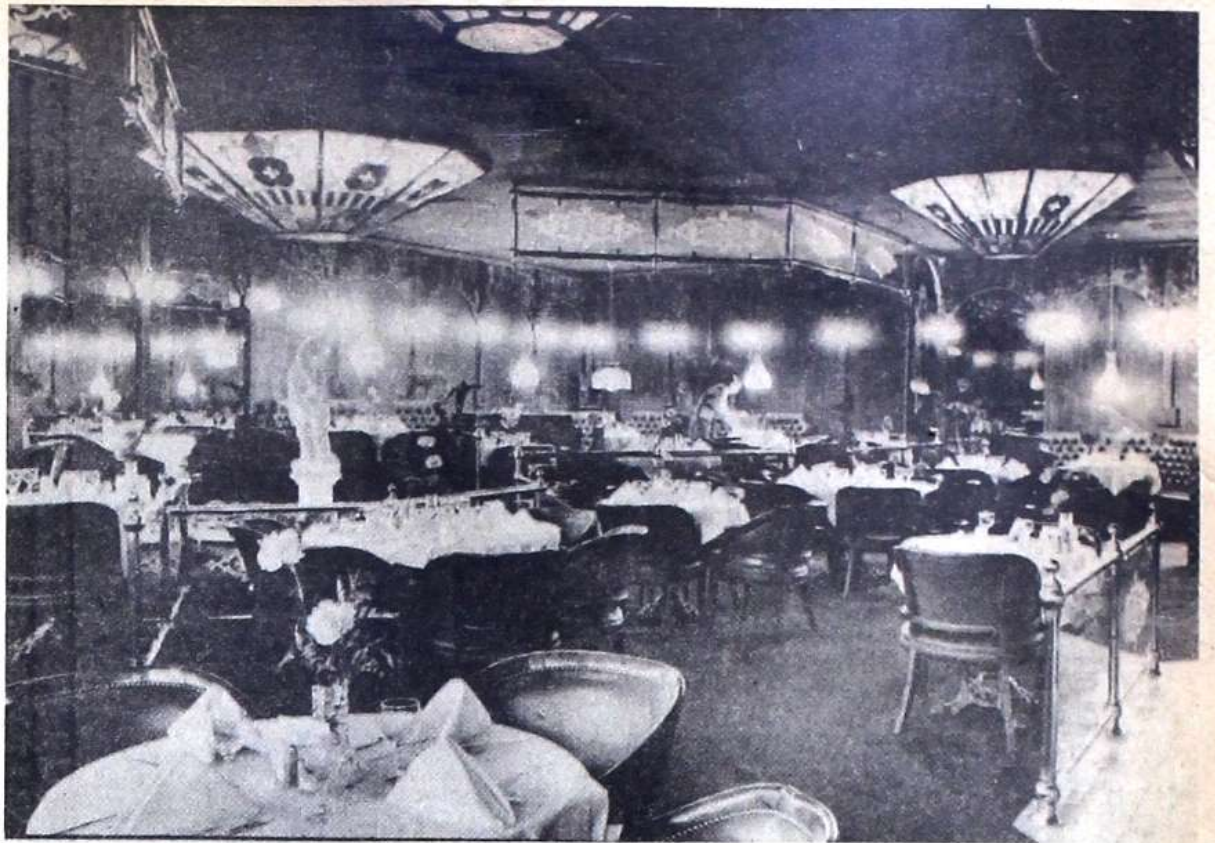

Desserts (try rolling these around your sweet tooth) include apple steudel with rum sauce, Swiss style cheese cake, walnut torte, cherries jubilee — seven goodies from 75 cents on up to the latter at $2.50.

The Loop Room (make a reservation to take your favorite gal there) is all burgundy, pink and deep purple in its bi-level opulence. Fresh pink and white flowers grace beautifully appointed tables and, again, Tiffany is called on to add a soft glow in octagonally-shaped convex lights. A white marble statue and splashing fountain are mirrored in a wall which centers the room. Comfortably cushioned booths and a series of tables can accommodate up to 100 diners.

Valian introduced his road house at 21400 Michigan Avenue to the dining public some seven years ago. The restaurant is conveniently located west of the Southfield freeway. Except for Christmas, it is open year-round from 12 to 12 on Sunday; 11:30 a.m. to 12 midnight week days and until 1 a.m. Friday and Saturday.

Sundays, you'll want to note, are special at Chicago Road House since the most popularly ordered entrees on the regular menu are then listed for only $5 — potato and salad included.

Try to make it for an early bird dinner but remember, it's nice to dine out after church on Sunday, too.

Loughran set for 2 concerts

The principal conductor of the Halle Orchestra of Manchester, England, James Loughran, will make his conducting debut with the Detroit Symphony Orchestra at 8:30 p.m. tomorrow and Friday in Ford Auditorium in Detroit.

Pianist Radu Lupu will be featured as soloist in Beethoven's Concerto No. 2 for Piano and Orchestra in B-flat Major, Opus 19.

Also on the program is the Mahler Symphony No. 5 in C-sharp minor.

Friday evening's concert is the third in the season's Zodiac series and includes a special pre-concert Prelude at 7:30 p.m. in the auditorium, free to ticketholders for the evening's performance.

Loughran was born in Glasgow, Scotland, in 1931 and began his musical career as assistant to Peter Maag at the Bonn Opera. Later he moved to similar appointments in Holland and Italy before returning to England to take first place in the Philharmonic Orchestra's competition for young conductors.

Subsequently, he was appointed associate conductor of the Bournemouth Symphony Orchestra, and in 1956 he was invited to return to his native Scotland as principal conductor of the BBC Scottish Symphony Orchestra.

The winner of three of the world's most prestigious piano competitions — Leeds, Georges Enesco and Van Cliburn — Radu Lupu brings an intensity and flair to his performance that has already generated comparisons with the legendary giants of the piano.

Tickets for the two performances are available at the Ford Auditorium Box Office.

Police Dispatcher Donates Scanner

Sam Notoli is a Canton Township police dispatcher. And he knows the value of a police scanner. And, since the Police Department has been utilizing a borrowed scanner for the past three months, Notoli decided that the department needed its own—so he went out and bought one.

Notoli dipped into his savings from his $2.30 an hour a job as a dispatcher last week and came up with the necessary $160.

"We needed one, so I donated my money to buy it, Notoli said "This is may way of helping my community."

"Besides, the township supervisor (Harold Stein) won't let us return our paychecks, but he can't stop me from donating things.

"And I hope something can be worked out so that we can donate our checks directly, that way our kitty for equipment will most likely grow larger a lot sooner."

Carl Silvers, police commander, said the department had been working with a borrowed scanner for more than three months.

"We really needed a new one, in fact, I was beginning to feel a little guilty using the one we had borrowed," Silvers said, "And, obviously, we're thankful for the donation. Not many people are as dedicated as Sam. He's one in a million."

Canton's law enforcement needs, presently are being supplied by the Wayne County Sheriff's Department. The township also has a part-time police force made up for local residents.

Get It Together J. Young

It's important to have honest and forthright municipal employees.

It's also important to have ones that have it together.

Romulus Public Information Officer, Jay Young, was told before his recent trip to Washington, D.C., that he must make a strict accounting of all expenses incurred during his stay in the capital city.

And, true to to his nature he kept every tab, every receipt, carefully guarded in a special envelope.

Unfortunately for him, he proceeded to lose the envelope upon his return to Romulus, thus making his stay $25 more expensive.

Reserved for Secret Meetings

This space is being reserved for the reporting of secret meetings that might be held after April 1st, when the 'Open Meetings' bill takes effect.

The 'Open MMeetings' bill (See Editorial on Page A-6), requires that our 'shy' elected officials conduct community business in the open view of the citizens.

It has been reported that meetings have already been held by some of those 'shy' elected officials for the purpose of discussing possible methods of circumventing the new law.

Associated Newspapers now accepts the challenge of becoming the watch-dog for citizens in this area. Any secret meetings held in any of the communities that we serve will be reported to our readers on this page.

Citizens should remember, the new legislation has teeth. Any elected official convicted of violating provisions of the new law is subject to criminal prosecution.

We hope that it will not be necessary for us to report on any violations, but with some officials scurrying around trying to beat the law already, we expect to be busy.

Have No Fear, 'He' Is Here

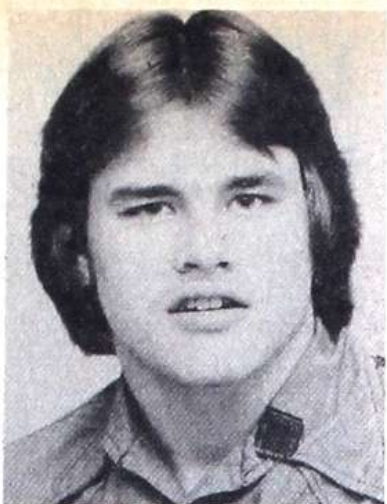

Canton dog catcher John Swalley, in a moment of weakness conceded that he has a deathly fear of dogs.

When he was asked how a dog catcher could long survive with a large fear of dogs, Swalley replied, "Sofar I have been able to con other people into catching the dogs for me."

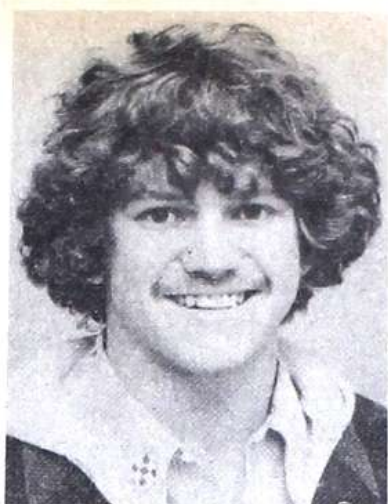

There appears to be no limit to man's resourcefulness when pressed for a solution to a complex problem.

All-Area wrestlers get the job done

By TOM MOORADIAN
Sports Editor

The winter was dismal and grim and could have been worst if it weren't for a score of young, restless high school wrestlers who proved they are among the best in the state.

This year's All-Area wrestling edition features a pair of Wayne wrestlers — Chris Leverenz and Randy Pittman — who finished fourth in the state, along with a host of others who captured league titles and qualified for state competition.

Wayne and Westland John Glenn, whose combined forces could have won the Class A state title, provide the bulk of All-Area wrestlers again this year.

Glenn's contributions to the first team include: Jerry Hensley (112), Nick Paciocco (126), and Jim Meyer (178), while along with Leverenz (165) and Pittman (126) also from Wayne are Andy MacEachern (105) and Tim Clark (132).

The balloting for first team accolades between Paciocco and Pittman were so close, that coaches in the area decided to honor both wrestlers as members of the first team.

Rounding out the team are Dennis Bergmooser (Romulus), Mark Ford (Belleville), Scott Collins (Plymouth Canton), Dave Champion (Plymouth Salem) and Mark De Witt (Livonia Churchill).

Both Wayne and John Glenn continue to monopolize their respective league championships. Coach Bob Lusk and the Rockets have won 10 of the 12 Northwest Suburban Conference titles, while Wayne and Coach Don Haney have a string of four Great Lakes 8 Conference titles.

Under fifth-year coach Gerald Malecek, Belleville has captured its initial Suburban 8 Conference championship.

Balance and experience give the first team the look of power. Bergmooser, a junior, amassed a 21-7-0 record as a member of Vern Logan's squad.

Dennis qualified for the regionals after surviving the tough Bedford district wrestle-downs, but sustained a knee injury which killed his chances in the regional.

"Obviously Dennis is one of our best wrestlers," Logan said. "And, the good part of it all is that he'll be back next year."

MacEachern ended an outstanding career at Wayne High with an 18-10-0 record. He qualified for the state at 105 and placed in a score of tournaments.

"Andy had the potential to go all the way," Haney noted, "sometimes he was the best wrestler in the state — but, unfortunately, he couldn't put it all together for the state finals."

Quotes from here and there

By TOM MOORADIAN
Sports Editor

A life of a sports editor without the benefit of a Associated Press wire machine can be especially rough during these transition periods from winter to spring sports.

But, thanks to our coaches, television, and the mail we can still keep up with our times.

And let's devote this space to the quotable quotes overheard this week.

John Wooden, former UCLA head basketball coach who was working as a commentator for TV during the University of Detroit-Michigan regional NCAA playoff game said of Johnny Long's performance:

"Johnny's just amazing," Wooden said. "He makes incredible shots."

It was Long's 19 points in the first half, plus 25 for the night, that kept Coach Dick Vitale's Titans in the game. Michigan, as we all know by now, ousted U of D, 86-81, then was an upset victim Saturday to North Carolina Charlotte.

Ironically, Central Michigan gave the same North Carolina team a scare, losing in overtime 91-86 in the first round of the NCAA tournament.

Long, who wound up as the Titans' leading scorer for the game and season, was named to the all-Mideast Regional Tournament team.

Long and Ron Bostick, who also played most of the game against the Wolverines, are former Romulus High cage stars.

Jak Warren, who has all of the facts and figures when it comes to high school wrestling in the area and state, praised the coaches who showed up last week to pick our All-Area teams. Among the coaches were Bob Lusk (John Glenn), Don Haney (Wayne Memorial), Avern Logan (Romulus), Dan Chrenko (Plymouth Canton), Ron Krueger (Plymouth Salem) and Gerald Malecek (Belleville).

"Do you know," said Warren, "that some of the finest coaching talent in this state is in that room picking your teams?"

Warren qualified with some statistics that backed up his argument — but those stats are too lengthy to go into here.

Warren also pointed out that if the Wayne-Westland Community School District would compete as one team and not two separate teams — Wayne Memorial and John Glenn — it would have won the Class A state wrestling championship the last three years.

Another area coach, Jerry Goldstein of Crestwood High, feels that Michigan is where the action is when it comes to high school wrestling.

Goldstein, who hails from Georgia, is returning to the South after two years as the head coach at the Dearborn Heights based high school.

"I work for Burroughs," Goldstein said, "but my first love is coaching. And I'm going back to Georgia to coach. I feel that Michigan has the finest high school wrestling program in the nation and the South can learn a lot from you people."

And the National Prep Sports Network, which likes to be known as the network of official magazines for high school athletes, carried an interesting local item recently.

It stated: "The Patriots of Franklin High School in Livonia have been ranked as one of the nation's top prep baseball teams, placing 16 in pre-season reviews of the upcoming action by Joe Namath's National Prep Sports Magazine."

That statement didn't catch us by surprise — the name of the magazine did, however.

Joe Namath's National Prep Sports Magazine? I thought that was some girlie magazine?

Anyway, we're happy that Namath is thinking high school sports — that's where most of the action is, right fans?

While we're on the subject of Livonia Franklin's baseball team, the Patriots' head coach, Ron Hellier, will be among several coaches who will be honored Saturday as a Coach of the Year.

Awards to the top coaches will be made during the Hall of Fame ceremonies at the 19th annual spring banquet of the Michigan High School Coaches Association to be held at 1 p.m., Saturday at Michigan State's Kellogg Center.

Great Lakes 8 Conference swim champs

Capping a perfect 7-0 league and a 13-1 over-all record with its inaugural Great Lakes 8 Conference swimming championship, Wayne Memorial enjoyed its best season ever in swimming. Coach Jim McPartlin, voted Coach of the Year in the league, also saw his team win league titles in the 400-yard freestyle relay with Karl Staber, Joe Miles, Mike Kuhn and Tom Brown. Brown also won the 500-yard freestyle league title and co-captain Chuck Smallman was the best diver in the league. Along with the league champs, Harold Sleicher, medley relay and backstroke, Brad Rockman, breaststroke, Mike Balwinski, butterfly and George Hills, 500-yard freestyle, were named to the all-conference team. Mike Kuhn was picked as Wayne's MVS (Most Valuable Swimmer) for the 1976-77 campaign.

Dolphins eye No. 8 win

League championships set for April 2

Aiming at an eighth straight victory in as many starts, the Wayne Recreation Dolphin Swim Club will visit Riverview's Pirates tomorrow night in the 1976-1977 Suburban Winter Swim Conference dual-meet finale.

A triumph would virtually assure the Dolphins of at least a tie for the conference championship.

Under league by-laws, each team receives points for dual-meet wins which are added to points received in the conference championship meet—with total points for the year deciding the league title.

The conference meet is scheduled for Saturday, April 2, at Cherry Hill High School.

Dolphin Coach Jim Lawrence, who will be returning home at Riverview tomorrow night, has only to worry about replacing some of his members who are swimming for junior high schools if Wayne is to maintain its streak.

Lawrence is a former Riverview High School performer and previously coached the Pirate Swim club before coming to Wayne this fall.

As he did two weeks ago against Cherry Hill, Lawrence and Assistant Coach Kirk Johnston will look for help to the vast array of younger Dolphin swimmers.

Both coaches expressed confidence in their elementary-school-aged swimmers who performed so well in the past.

Three of those Lawrence is looking to for help will also represent Wayne at the Michigan Class AA Amateur Athletic Union state championships Saturday and Sunday. They are Eric Head, Todd Melanshek and Mike Greuber.

The trio will compete in a variety of events for Class AA honors at Clarenceville High School.

Wolverine matmen fare well at state

Wayne-Westland Wolverine Wrestling Club continued its assault on medals last week at the Hazel Park Tournament, site of the Southeastern, Michigan Age Group Wrestling Association regionals.

The matches determined the qualifiers for the state meet. The local group wrestling club came away with 18 medals.

Though shutout from golds in the 8-and-under age group, the Wayne-Westland wrestlers earned a second place with John Godzina at 55-pounds and a pair of third place medals with Brett Justin, also 55-pounds, and Dan Schimansky at 61.

In the 9-10 category, Tom Forchione came away with a silver medal for his performance at 100, while 77-pound teammate Ron Nastal finished third.

The 11-12 year olds returned home with three gold medals. The champs were Robb Paciocco, a 90-pounder; Don Forchione, 112, and Rick Everly, an 82-pounder. Dean Garza wound up second at 95 and John Novick, finished third in the 95-pound class.

Mark Flores, a 105-pounder, and teammate Scott Thornton, a 155-pounder, represented the local team on the winner's dias in the 13-14 age group. Jim Everly (119) and Keith Zimmerman (138) were runners-up in their respective weight classes while Tony Bono (132) and Pete Bologna (90) finished third.

Last Saturday, the Wolverines sent their state qualifiers to Oakland University for the Southeastern Michigan Age Group finals.

"We feel it was one of the best tournaments that our kids competed in all year," said Coach Sam Adams who shares the responsibility of fielding the team with Steve Fugaban.

Rick Everly and Robb Paciocco emerged from the mats with gold medals in the 82 and 90-pound classes while Don Forchione finished second at 112 for the 11 and 12 year olds.

Keith Zimmerman was a runner-up at 138 for the 13-and-14 year olds, the closest the local group got to winning a gold in that age group, while both Jim Everly and Scott Thornton wound up third at 119 and 155, respectively.

Also, the Wolverines sent a delegation to Sanford, Mich. to compete in the U.S. Kids Wrestling Federation Open Tournament hosted by Meridian High School.

The Wolverines came home with a pair of gold medals thanks to Scott Griffith, at 55, and Mike Conboy, at 64. Charlie Lauber earned a silver medal at 72 while Steve Alewine (heavyweight), Ken Hodges (154) were third and Joe Prater finished fourth at 154.

Westland Center to host annual boating show

This year's Westland Shopping Center's Boat Show will be featuring, along with a large selection of the latest in fishing and pleasure boats, racing boats from all major boat racing categories.

At Westland the 200 mph Miss Vernor's Unlimited Hydroplane powered by a 2,000 horsepower airplane engine will be the Big attraction.

Also the latest in Drag Boats capable of speeds over 150 mph in the quarter mile.

Off-shore racing will be represented by several members and boats from the Lake St. Clair offshore racing association. Offshore racing made famous by the rugged flat out Miami to Nassau Race is quickly becoming a big attraction on the Great Lakes.

Marine propriders will have several racing hydroplanes, including Bob Dadrowski's, specialists, of Detroit, a 225 cubic inch hydroplane powered by an aluminum V8 Buick engine, fresh from his first place finish at St. Petersburg, Florida, race in February.

Ron Brown will have his grand prix hydroplane on display, which will be competing on the Detroit River in a new race to be held in conjunction with the Unlimited Hydroplane Race this year.

Trenton Outboard Club will have several outboard hydroplanes on display.

All displays will have representatives on hand to give families the latest information on race dates and how to become more involved in boat racing.

Westland Center hours are from 9:30 to 9 Monday thru Saturday and 11 to 6 on Sunday.

Lindsay will keep local skating date

Though he was just named the Detroit Red Wings' general manager, Ted Lindsay said this week that he will have time to skate in a charity game at the Wayne Arena.

Lindsay will be playing on the side of the teachers when the Franklin Junior High faculty take on the students in their second annual American Cancer Benefit Game.

Part of the proceeds will go to the foundation, while some of the proceeds will be returned to the Franklin Junior High Hockey Club.

"I talked to Lindsay and he said that he will definitely be here on Friday," said Bob Wood, sponsor of the Franklin Hockey Club. "He said that though his schedule is a busy one, he won't miss the game."

The faculty and students will face off at 7:30 p.m. and the students will be out to avenge last year's loss. The students will be coached by Tom Nordeen and Bob Moran.

There will be entertainment between periods provided by a Wayne Girls' Figure Skating group. A contest, "Score-O" is also scheduled between periods.

Tickets may be obtained for $1 and 50 cents for adults and students, respectively, either at the junior high school, the arena or Wayne Memorial High School.

All-Area Second team is young and restless

Many people applaud Plymouth Salem's basketball and football teams, but there is another group at the high school that has earned the respect of its peers — Coach Ron Krueger's wrestlers.

Salem had an impressive 12-3-1 over-all record this season. And, of the three wrestlers from Plymouth named to the All-Area team, two are underclassmen, leading one to believe that next year's squad will be equally potent.

"We feel we have the nucleus of an excellent squad for next year," Krueger said. "And we're looking forward to next season."

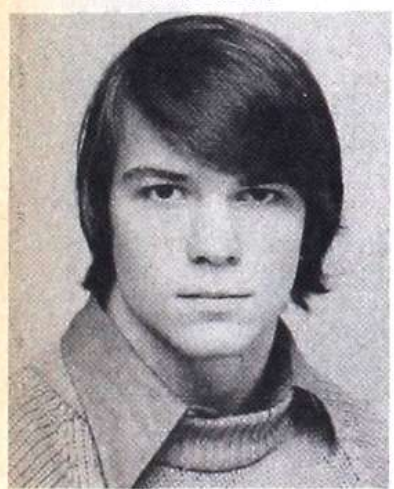

One of the wrestlers whom Krueger definitely will miss is Dave Champion, a 191-pounder who is a two-time Suburban 8 Conference champ. Dave was named to the area's No. 1 team.

Champion finished the year with a 35-5-2 record, but two of those losses were in state competition. He placed first at the Allen Park Invitational and Plymouth, North Farmington and league tournaments while he was runner-up in the Thurston and Schoolcraft meets.

Dave qualified for the state finals after finishing third at the regional. Hewon the first match, breaking the wrestler who eventually finished fourth in the state, then lost his next two.

DON WOODBY

CHRIS BACHUS

RANDY VIPPORMAN

DENNIS BERGMOOSER

Champion holds six records at Salem including the most wins (35), most career wins (78), most team points (217½), most career points (397½), best won-lost record for a season and best percentage record for career (78-21-5).

"Need we say more about this athlete?" Krueger rhetorically asked. "We'll miss him."

Vipporman is a sophomore and his 24-14 record is the best sophomore record in the school's long history. Randy qualified for regional competition where he was eventually eliminated.

Vipporman earned a flock of second place medals, including the Allen Park, Thurston, Schoolcraft Invitational while he finished third at the Plymouth Invitational.

Leist, a junior, amassed a 30-12-1 record which stands as the best ever by any junior wrestler. Rene also placed second at Allen Park, third at Plymouth and in the league while he finished fourth at Thurston.

A state qualifier, Randy won one of his three matches in state competition.

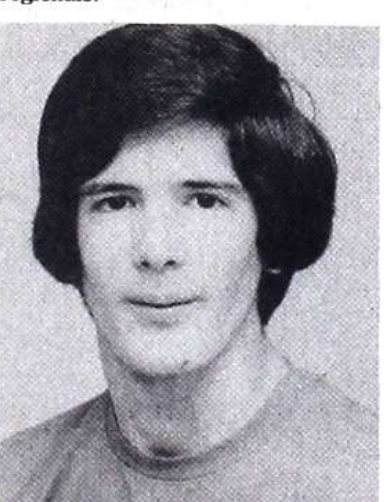

Others also honored on this year's mythical All-Area second team are Mike Jack (106-Livonia Churchill), Bo Wanshon (119-Wayne Memorial), Bill Meyer (132-John Glenn), Mike Collins (138-John Glenn), Chris Bachus (145-Wayne Memorial), Jerry Cook (155-John Glenn), Don Woodby (165-Belleveille), Ed Leverenz (178-Wayne Memorial), Mark Grabowski (191-John Glenn) and weight Kevin Wilson (Wayne Memorial).

Wanshon got stronger as the season matured and finished his junior year with a 22-12 record.

"He seems to peak at the end of the season and I feel he's going to be an outstanding wrestler," said Wayne Coach Don Haney.

Bachus also will be back in Wayne's lineup. The rugged junior posted a 33-6 record and displayed signs of greatness on the mats. "He loves wrestling and works his head off," Haney added.

Chris won the league title at 145-pounds, then finished third at the regionals.

BO WANSHON

BILL MEYER

KEVIN WILSON

Ed Leverenz, whose younger brother, Chris, was named as a first stringer, was considered "the strongest wrestler on Wayne's squad." He won 20 of his 31 matches this season and on "sheer strength" earned a league title at 178 and was one of Wayne's seven who qualified for the state.

Wilson will be heading for Adrian College upon graduation where he hopes to continue his wrestling career. Kevin won 23 of his 35 matches and Haney feels that Wilson hasn't peaked yet.

"In another year, at college, Kevin's going to be tough," Haney said.

Hampered by an injury, Belleville's Don Woodby still managed to place third in the Suburban 8 at 165. He was the top-seed in the league.

"He has great potential, is a very strong individual and really did his job this year," Coach Gerald Malecek said.

Sophomore Bill Meyer will be around for a couple of more years and he should be a top contender for state honors before he ends his prep career. As a soph, Bill amassed a 21-10 record, finished second in the league, won the Ann Arbor Novice Tournament and was second at Flint Beecher, fifth in WW.

Collins, a state qualifier, was tagged as the Rockets' most improved wrestler. He won a gold at the league championships, first at the Western Wayne but an illness sidelined him in the stretch.

Grabowski, considered one of the finest wrestlers in Glenn's history, ended his season prematurely because of an injury. He had a 15-1 record before he was sidelined.

An outstanding football player as well, Mark won the only two tournaments he entered this season.

"I feel he would have placed high in the state — at least among the top four if his season hadn't been cut short," said Coach Bob Lusk.

Jack, a senior, is Churchill's only representative to the second team. He was a state qualifier and also won the Western Six Conference championship.

A good start

Former Romulus High and All-Area grappler LaMar Sandusky has gotten off to an excellent start on the mats at the University of Toledo. LaMar has compiled a 10-7-1 won-lost-tied record in the 118-pound class and is expected to be among the team's top performers when the season rolls around a year from now.

EMU signs Crews

Wayne Memorial's Bill Crews has signed a Mid-American Conference letter of intent to play baseball at Eastern Michigan University, according to a recent announcement made by the EMU coaching staff.

The 6-4, 180-pound senior centerfielder is a six-time letter winner at Memorial in baseball, basketball (forward) and football (split-end - safety).

He has earned All-League honors two straight years in baseball and basketball while gaining honorable mention All-Metro honors in both football and basketball.

Crews is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Crews of 33040 Parkhill Blvd., in Wayne.

Crews will be joining former Wayne Memorial great, Glenn Ambrose, a regular last year on EMU's national finalist baseball team, and Al Slamer, a 6-3, 235 pound senior who anchors the Huron defensive line.

Westlander skates for state champs

Fifteen-year-old John Combs played a key role in helping the Michigan Sharks capture the state Bantam Open National Hockey League championships last week.

Combs, a Westland resident, plays forward and also is a defensive standout for the Sharks who will head for New Jersey next month to play for the national title.

Combs has seen action for a team that has amassed a 48-12-4 won-lost-tied record and also won the Chicago Invitational, the John Phillips Tournament along with the Michigan Hockey Association and Fraser Turkey titles.

A Stevenson Junior High student, Combs is coached and managed by Paul Ferguson, Adam Mitchell and Lee Korneick.

Westland to stage free throw shooting contest

Friday, April 1 - and that's no fooling - is the final day that boys and girls can sign up for Westland's fifth annual free throw contest.

Competitors will be placed according to age groups and classes with fourth grade and under competing in one group; fifth and sixth graders in a second group.

Competition will also be held for seventh through ninth, and 10th through 12 grades. Each individual will be allowed 25 free throws.

Boys and girls must be Westland residents in order to be eligible to compete in the contest. Each contestant will be given three practice shots before the tournament begins.

All shooting will be in accordance with the free throw rules of the National Federation of State High School Athletic Association and will be under the supervision of Westland Parks and Recreation personnel.

In case of a tie for a trophy position, the contestants involved in the tie will shoot off in brackets of 10 shots each until the tie is broken.

Boys should write their names, address, school, grade and mail the information to Paddy Lynn, basketball supervisor, while girls should send the same information to Mari Pitcher, Westland Parks and Recreation, 32715 Dorsey Road, Westland 48185.

There is no entry fee. Deadline to register is April 1, while the contest will be held on April 5, Tuesday, at Marshall Jr. High School, 35100 Bayview, Westland.

Further information may be obtained by telephoning the recreation departments at 722-7620.

Scholarships await local gal athletes at WSU

Wayne State University will conduct auditions for Activity Awards, WSU's financial aid program for student-athletes, in two women's sports Monday, March 28, from 3-6 p.m. in the Matthaei Building.

Tryouts will be held for women's basketball and women's softball by their respective coaches. Gloria Soluk has directed WSU's women's basketball for the last three seasons while Joanne Shirkey is in her first season as women's softball coach.

The auditions are open to all 1976-77 high school seniors who are interested in receiving athletic financial aid to attend Wayne State University and participate in athletics.

Participating students must provide their own locks, uniforms and softball players must also bring their own gloves. High school coaches are invited to attend with their players.

WSU's Activity Awards for women, awarded on an athletic ability basis, can more than cover a student's tuition, fees and books if a student is recommended for a maximum award.

Coaches Soluk and Shirkey may be contacted at 577-4265 or in the WSU Matthaei Building.

Regnier speaks at mat clinic

Bill Regnier, who coached Bedford Temperance to its second consecutive Class A state wrestling championship, will be among the guest speakers at the third annual Westland John Glenn clinic.

The clinic will be held Monday, March 28 through March 31 from 6:30 p.m. until 9 p.m. Registration will be accepted Monday at 6 p.m. There is a $12 fee.

Other prominent speakers include Mike Rodriguez, Detroit Catholic Central coach, Bill Johnsen, University of Michigan head coach and Ernie Gillum, head coach at Ann Arbor Huron.

Further information may be obtained by telephoning Bob Lusk, head coach at John Glenn. He can be reached at 728-1800, extension 73.

Guided Tigers to 1st title

Malecek is 'Coach of the Year'

It took five long, frustrating years, but Belleville High won its first Suburban 8 Conference wrestling championship.

And the Tigers can thank 27-year-old Gerald Malecek, who guided the young grapplers to a 7-0 conference and a 10-2 over-all mark during the 1976-77 campaign.

For his accomplishments, The Associated Newspapers are honored to select Malecek as its Coach of the Year.

A two-time Big 10 wrestling champ, Malecek inherited Belleville High's team in 1972 from Tom Fritz. Malecek went about to forge one of the top teams in the area, but the elusive Suburban 8 Conference title — remained just that — elusive until this year.

"Though we had more individual champs last year and the year before, we managed to win the championship this year thanks to the balance we had."

"Another good thing about this year's team was that we'll have most of the boys back — we're graduating only two," Malecek added.

A native of Belle Plaines, Iowa, Malecek headed for Michigan State University where he managed to win two consecutive Big 10 wrestling titles at 166 and 177 pounds. He finished fourth in his sophomore year at the NCAA Invitational and also fourth as a senior in the same tournament.

Malecek pointed out that he has been stressing "take-downs" in practice and apparently it has been paying off.

"I feel that take-downs are the most important thing a wrestler can shoot for and that's why we stress them in practice a lot."

"Also, we aim at always trying to have a full contingent in our junior varsity line-up, so, if one of our varsity wrestlers turns up sick or injured we have a back-up man ready," Malecek.

Malecek is married to Margie and the couple make their home in Ypsilanti Township.

Our All-Area wrestling team gets the job done on mats

"Jerry has been a standout on our team for three years and he'll be difficult to replace," Coach Lusk said.

Ford won the Suburban 8 Conference title at 117-pounds and placed third at the regional to get a shot at the state crown. He won one of the three matches he had at state.

"Mark is a devoted wrestler who is following in his brother's (Phil) footsteps," said Malecek. "He should prove to be very tough in his senior year."

Pittman also brought down the curtains to an exceptional mat career by placing fourth in the state at 126. Awesome in most of the tournaments this season, Randy was in a "weight class that was extremely tough this season," according to Haney. Randy had a 30-5-1 record.

"I felt Randy was as good as anyone in the state," Haney explained. "There were at least five who could have won the state title in that weight class."

One of those five was Nick Paciocco who wound up his senior year with an enviable 33-2-2 record.

Paciocco had a string of victories including the league championship at 126, a gold medal at both the prestigious Detroit Catholic Central and Schoolcraft Invitionals along with firsts places at Flint Beecher, Western Wayne and Salem.

"Nick was a two-year performer for us," Lusk related. "He was injured as a sophomore, went to the state as a junior and captained this year's team. He was also voted out Most Valuable Wrestler."

Clark brings to the All-Area squad a 29-7-1 record in the 132-pound class. A senior who saw his state ambitions shattered by an injury, Tim placed in every tournament he competed in this season except the state meet.

"Clark was definitely the slickest wrestler we had on this year," Haney commented. "That ankle injury, I felt, cost him a medal in the state."

Corry Bachus said as a sophomore, "that someday I will win the state title."

Corry's timetable is on schedule. As a junior this year Bachus won 31 of his 39 matches including league titles and a regional gold.

"He's a hard-nose, the hardest nose wrestler we have on the team. Corry won matches because he was just guttier than his opponent," Haney pointed out.

Collins is the lone representative from Plymouth Canton. The 145-pound junior posted a 38-9 record which included the Western Six Conference championship, the district and regional titles.

"We feel that he will be a state-caliber wrestler next season," said Coach Dan Chrenko. "He's coachable and is a devoted athlete."

Scott also had 20 pins, the most carded by his team and posted 80 takedowns and 93 near falls.

In his second year on varsity, Johnson won the Suburban 8 Conference title at 155. The Belleville junior also compiled a 20-8 record and survived district competition to place fourth in the regional.

"Despite wrestling at a weight class higher than he was certified, Stan did an outstanding job in the state," Malecek said.

AUTO FACTS

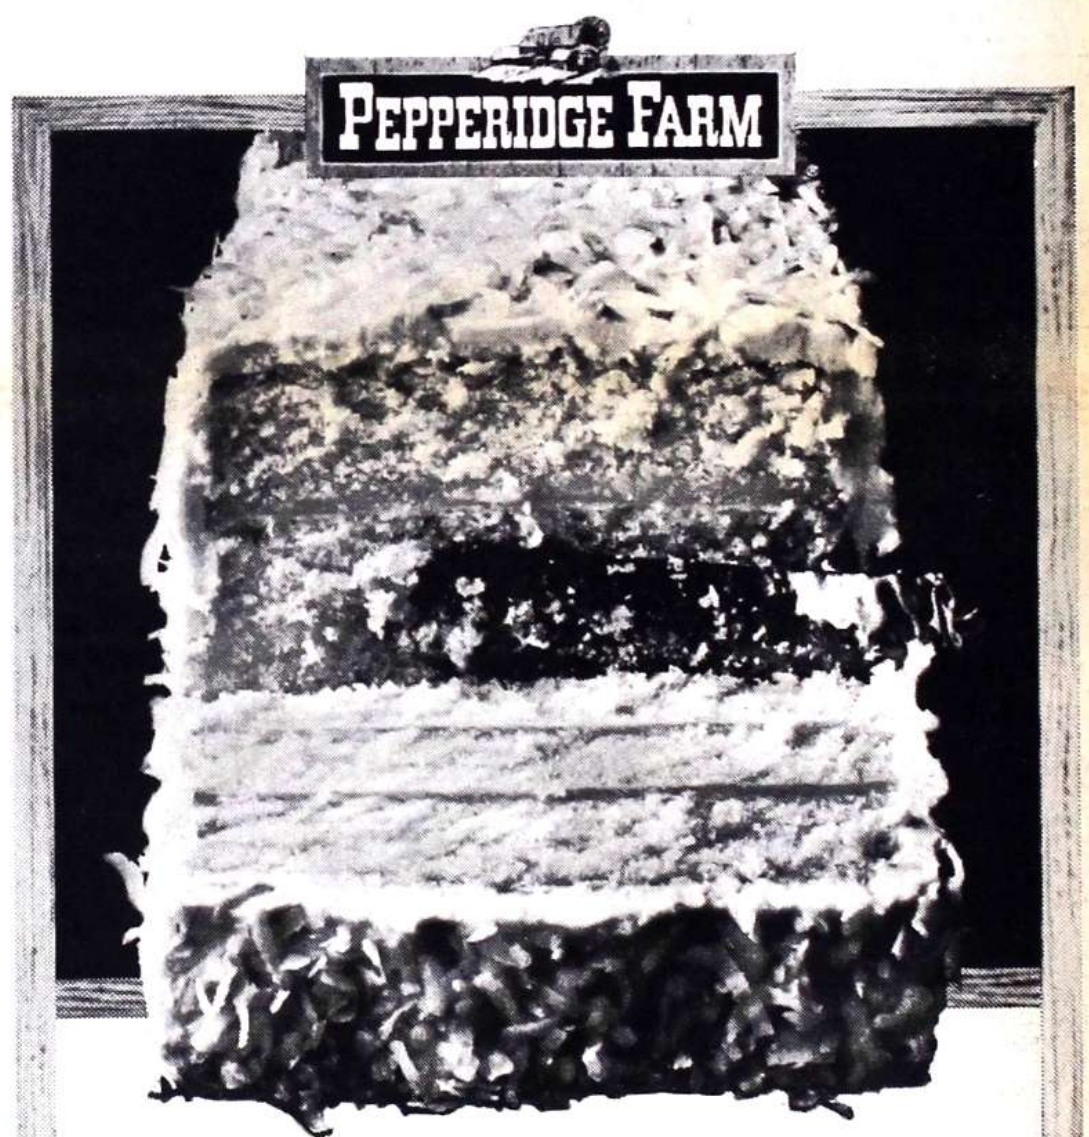

By Chester Kosin

Noises from the bumpers, fenders and grille of your car are usually the result of loose bolts. By opening the hood and doors, these body bolts are easily accessible. With a socket wrench, tighten every accessible loose bolt. Also tighten all bolts or screws on the door, trunk and hood hinges, as well as those that fasten the lock and latch components. Some door hinges are mounted with large screws that can be tightened only with special tools. If that is the case, the job should be done by a professional.

Before you give your car a regular Spring tune-up, visit KOSIN'S AUTO PARTS, 26831 Michigan Ave., Inkster, for the parts and accessories you need! We feature quality parts and tools for both foreign and domestic cars. Our knowledgeable staff will be happy to help you select the parts you need for your particular car. Take advantage of our complete machine shop service for turning brake drums, doing valve work, and rebuilding engines. Call us at 563-3894. We are open daily from 8 A.M. until 8 P.M. and on Saturdays until 5 P.M. Bank Americard and Master Charge are honored.
